A. B. CARSCALLEN IS CHOICE OF LENNOX CONSERVATIVES

THERE WAS A BIG CONVENTION — RESOLUTION REGARDING W. J. PAUL— ADDRESS BY HON. DR. J. W. EDWARDS.

A. B. Carscallen, general merchant, Tamworth, was nominated as Conservative standard-bearer for the counties of Lennox and Addington at a very largely attended convention held in the armouries last Wednesday afternoon. After the second ballot had been taken the selection was made unanimous.

Both ballots, which were taken, were in favor of Mr. Carscallen. The result of the ballots was: First ballot, A. B. Carscallen, 158; J. W. Robinson, 34; Cyrus Edgar, 38; C. W. Hambly, 83; Joseph Foster, 36; W. J. Bell, 39; and A. C. Tummon, 14. The result of the second ballot: A. B. Carscallen, 200; J. W. Robinson, 31; C. W. Hambly, 102; Joseph Foster, 24; and A. M. Bell, 35. The total number of votes cast: First ballot, 402; second ballot, 392.

W. D. Black, M.P.P., W. W. Adams, Joseph Hicks, Henry Drew, and W. J. Paul, who were nominated, asked that their names be withdrawn before the vote was taken.

THE NOMINEES

The following were nominated: W. D. Black, Parham; W. W. Adams, Newburgh; A. B. Carscallen, Tamworth; J. W. Robinson, Napanee; Cyrus Edgar, Yarker; Joseph Hicks, Fredericksburgh; C. W. Hambly, Napanee; Joseph Foster, Moscow; Henry Drew, Violet; A. M. Bell, Moscow; W. J. Paul, Tamworth; A. C. Tummon, Selby.

THE CANDIDATE SPEAKS

The candidate elect, when called to speak, stated that he was confident the Conservative party would be elected if everybody got down to real hard work. He stated that he was satisfied with the policy of Hon. Arthur Meighen, the leader of the party and premier. He had yet to find where the leader had deviated from the platform laid down. The candidate also asked the question if the same thing could be said of the other two leaders. Mr. Carscallen made it clear that if W. J. Paul, the present member, or W. D. Black, M.P.P., had wanted the nomination he would have not been in the field. Before taking his seat, he took occasion to say that he had been a merchant for thirty years and the interests of the farmers were identical with his. Many of the farmers had a lean year he, as a business man, had a lean year also.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED

During the afternoon resolutions of appreciation and confidence were passed to the following: Right Honorable Arthur Meighen, Hon. Howard Ferguson, W. J. Paul, M.P., W. D. Black, M.P.P., and R. A. Fowler, M.P.P.

The following resolution was passed regarding W. J. Paul, M.P., who on account of ill health has been forced to retire from the political arena:

Moved by Archie Carscallen, seconded by C. W. Hambly, and resolved:

"That the Liberal Conservative Association of Lennox and Addington, in convention now assembled, desires to place on record its appreciation of the faithful and unselfish service rendered to the electors of the constituency of Lennox and Addington by William J. Paul, Esquire, ex-M.P., during the memorable years which have elapsed since he entered the federal arena in 1911. During those years there never was a question of the loyalty and devotion of our representative to the cause of the British Empire and British connection, and he was always found upholding these measures which had for their object the upbuilding of Canadian institutions, Canadian industries, Canadian commerce, and the development of Canadian natural resources. Courteous and obliging in his intercourse with his constituents, and laboring for them not only collectively but individually as far as lay in his power, he has shown himself the popular representative, while his keen grasp of Canadian affairs, and of the administration of the affairs of the departments of government, have rendered him capable of being of immense assistance to the government of which he has been a consistent supporter. We also congratulate him upon his apparent restoration to health, and his recent happy marriage, and wish him many years of bliss in a joyous wedded life."

ADDRESSES OF CANDIDATES

H. A. Baker, Moscow, president of the county executive, presided. He stated that it was just seven years since a convention of that kind had been held in the county.

W. D. Black, M.P.P., the first candidate nominated, stated that a large number of people from the county had asked him to go before the convention but in view of the fact that many people had been instrumental in getting him into the provincial legislature he would be guilty of an act of ingratitude if he decided to run for dominion honors. He took occasion to compliment W. J. Paul, the retiring dominion representative, for his faithfulness. Before taking his seat he took a "swing" at Mr. Sexsmith, the U.F.O. candidate, who he claimed was a Conservative for a year, then a Liberal, and last of all a U.F.O.

W. J. Paul told the gathering that it was only on account of ill-health that he was forced to withdraw his name. Last May he was very sick and his life held on a thread. The doctors warned him that he must retire from public life, if he ever expected to regain his strength.

A. C. Tummon, of Selby, in a few words told the electors that if they saw fit to send him as their representative to Ottawa, he would do his best in the interest of the county, and if not, he would give his whole support to the choice of the convention.

J. W. Robinson, merchant, Napanee, said that he had come before the convention, and had not solicited a vote. If the gathering saw fit to vote for him, well and good, and if they didn't, then well and good. He stated that he had never cast anything but a Conservative vote, and to-day he was enthusiastic over Meighen's policy.

A. M. Bell stated that he had always been a farmer, and would likely die as such. He announced that he had been appointed deputy returning officer for the county, but had declined that position, and had forwarded his resignation to the chief election officer, Col. Biggar. When he declined the office, he was asked by a representative who he would recommend for the position, and he advised, J. M. Simpson, barrister, a returned man who at the present time was practising in Napanee. Mr. Simpson is crippled for life as a result of service in the great war.

C. W. Hambly, who ran second in the contest, said that he appeared before them without solicitation, and if they saw fit to elect him he would do the best that was in him; if not, he would support the candidate selected by the convention.

Cyrus Edgar, who has had considerable municipal experience, and had been warden of the counties of Lennox and Addington, asked the support of the convention.

Joseph Foster, in a quiet, lengthy speech, said that he was a leader of the Farmers' party, had not turned over a furrow of ground in twenty-five years.

W. W. Adams, Joseph Hicks, and Henry Drew, thanked the movers and seconders of their nomination, but asked that their names be withdrawn.

DR. EDWARDS SPEAKS

Hon. Dr. J. W. Edwards, minister of health and immigration, dealt for some time with the financial situation of the dominion. He took occasion to show how the Drury government, which was supposed to be government of economy, had spent all kinds of money during their term of office. The farmers are around the government house, with their plug hats, etc., asking which they have been crying down for years.

The election of officers for the ensuing year took place as follows: Geo. Gould, president; Dr. Stratton, secretary; Charles Hambly, first vice-president; and John N. Osborne, treasurer.

The meeting was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

ODDFELLOWS' "AT HOME"

On Thursday evening, Argyll Lodge No. 212, held their annual "At Home." The members and their families turned out in such numbers that the spacious lodge rooms in the Merchants Bank block, were taxed to accommodate the guests.

The various rooms were decorated in Hallowe'en style, witches and black cats, combined with yellow and black crepe paper, added that mysterious feeling which is usually to be found about lodge rooms.

Everyone entering the lodge room proper was given a cardboard ticket which contained the pass-word for the evening. This ticket was eventually used in a guessing contest which proved to be one of the most enjoyable numbers on the programme. A glass container, holding a number of links, was passed through the audience and each was given the privilege of guessing the number enclosed.

Three prizes were given. Mrs. Mrs. J. G. Sills and Mrs. H. W. Kelly were the lucky ladies, while Mr. J. E. Miller won the gentlemen's prize, which was an emblem of the Order (three links), beautifully executed from doughnuts.

The Napanee orchestra, which is composed of members of Argyll Lodge, and their families, played several numbers while the guests were assembling, and these were as enjoyable as their programme selections.

The complete programme of varied local talent proved most interesting and decidedly entertaining. Each artist was enthusiastically received.

The programme:

DENBIGH

Mrs. A. Fritsch, who was a couple of weeks in the Kinngston general hospital under medical treatment, is home again.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Fritsch and daughters, who were about two months away at Webb, Sask., visiting relatives who have made their home there, and looking after some real estate, have also arrived home again.

Mr. Wm. Heady, who was also engaged in harvesting and threshing operations in Sask. also is home again.

Mrs. C. Briggs, of Harrisville, N.Y., a former resident of this township, and still owner of real estate here, has arrived to look after her property, and to pay a visit to relatives, former neighbors and friends in the vicinity.

Mr. M. Rodgers, also a former Denbigh citizen, paid a visit to his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hughs, of Vennachar, and favored some of his former neighbors and old friends with a call.

A number of electors from this municipality enjoyed a motor trip to Napanee to take part in the selection of a candidate for the Conservative party for this riding for the coming Federal election.

Elections are now the topic of conversation. With but a U.F.O. and a Conservative in the field there promises to be a battle royal.

It is about time the farmer had something to say in regards to whom shall represent him at Ottawa.

Mr. J. B. Weese has gone to visit friends in the West for the winter.

Balls and parties are now raging, and between these and political meetings, we will have many late evenings.

The price of cattle and hogs are not very encouraging to the farmers just at present.

Butchers seem to be numerous lately.

ODESSA

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Emery, of Cherry Valley, spent a recent Sunday as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Smith.

Miss Flora Clark, Bloomfield, Mr. and Mrs. W. Humphries, of Adolphustown, and John Aylesworth, Selby, were at B. G. Hann's.

Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Dougherty, Kingston, visited Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dougherty.

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Stevenson, Bath, were guests of Mrs. Stevenson's father, E. W. Toplift.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Huff, Yarker, at Walter Atkinson's.

The many friends of Mrs. Jas. McQueen will be pleased to hear that she is recovering nicely from a two weeks' illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Shane spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John Shane, Newburgh.

Miss Agnes Shire visited her parents in Enterprise.

Mrs. Chas. Emmons and Mrs. Joseph McConnell left Friday to visit their brother, Justice Asselstine, Campbellford, who is seriously ill.

Mrs. Radcliffe and children, Edith and Teddy, who have been guests at Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Hodge, left last week for their new home in Wallaceburg.

A baby girl has arrived to make her home with Mr. and Mrs. Rexl Hartman.

PRESENTATION

To Mrs. Chas. Kimmett, Jr.,

We, the members of the Ladies' Aid Society, of Roblin Methodist church, would not allow this opportunity to pass without showing some gratitude for the assistance you have given our Society in the past.

We also wish you to know we have appreciated your services as organist in our church.

We sincerely hope that since your marriage to a member of one of the oldest families of Roblin and as your home is still in our community, you will continue to remain a member of our Ladies' Aid and help us as you have done for years.

We congratulate your husband on his success in winning you for a life companion, and hope that God's blessings and guidance will surround you both through a long life of success and happiness.

In order to show our appreciation we wish to present you with this mantle clock, and we hope and believe it will indicate the time in this happy home for many years to come.

Signed on behalf of the Ladies' Aid Society of Roblin:

MRS. CARLETON WOODS, President.

MRS. D. RICHMOND, Recording Secretary

MRS. C. E. KIMMETT, Treasurer.

A LITTLE TALK ON POULTRY

The M. B. MILLS firm expect by now that their reputation for fair dealing has reached nearly all the farmers in the county, as evidenced by the fact that our poultry business is increasing all the time and that we are headquarters for poultry in this district. Still there is a lot of poultry raised here that we don't get, and we want it, so we are offering from now on highest prices for live and dressed poultry for all kinds. We will give from 22c. to 25c. per lb. for good plump, well-fitted chicks, fasted, dry plucked, all feathers off, properly bled. Will pay extra for fancy milk fed, crate fattened stuff. We want all your hens this fall the year round. We guarantee correct weights in every case, and you take your money home with you, without waiting, as when shipped to the cities. We want the bulk of the stuff delivered up to Wednesday afternoon, but will take in any day.

Shop at the foot of the street the post office and market in Napanee and go to it in November. Turkeys, geese, ducks, also bought at all times.

Want Our Trees.

In Exposition Park, Los Angeles, Cal., a section has been set aside known as "the Forest of State Trees." In the plot already dedicated for that purpose several of the states have planted trees. The Canadian Maple Leaf Club is recognized as a member of the Federation of State Societies and has been accorded the same privilege. This year, four trees have been planted by the Canadian Maple Leaf Club, two Norway maples, one silver maple and one sycamore maple. These trees were sent from Canada and were a gift to the Maple Leaf Club from Mr. Richard Palmer, of Toronto, residing at 1024 Mutual street.

In the absence of President Howard Shaver, Treasurer Amberger had charge of the ceremony at which many prominent Canadians now permanent residents of the Canadian colony in Los Angeles were present.

PARLIAMENTARY LETTER

The Maritime Provinces tour of Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King wound up in a blaze of glory and the Liberal leader is now home again and ready for his tour through Ontario points. From Sydney to St. John the people of the Atlantic Provinces came out in thousands to hear the inspiring messages of the young leader of the Liberals, and in many cases, to compare his frank exposition of the problems of the day with the attempt of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen and his supporters to distract all attention from the blunders and autocracies of the government by shouting "tariff." Where the people were able to hear both leaders and to make comparison, the comparisons were all in favor of the Liberal leader, who won friends everywhere for himself and the Liberal cause. In the provinces visited there are many voters, formerly Conservative, who have declared openly that they will, this election, give their support to the Liberal candidates, and thus help to end Mr. Meighen's career—as Prime minister.

Everywhere the optimism for the Liberal cause is the same. Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island will return practically solidly Liberal tickets, and New Brunswick will do better this year than ever before in that regard. Reports from the other provinces are also most encouraging. Splendid candidates are being placed in the field everywhere, so that when election day is over, the Liberal party will have in parliament an array of strong men, ready to take up the burdens of administration and carry it on successfully.

And while candidates for the Liberal party are coming forward splendidly, every day brings new word of one or another of the Meighen stalwarts who has become disgusted and is refusing to stand the domination of the "bidden hand" behind the Meighen party. The loss of W. S. Middlebro, chief Conservative whip, is one that Mr. Meighen will not soon overcome. Mr. Middlebro was one of the strongest men in the party, and as Chief Whip, claimed that he should have been extended at least the courtesy of a telegram advising him of his chief's decision to go to the country. But Mr. Middlebro, in common with other men supposed to be influential in the government party, was told of the birth of his chief's decision from the press notices. It is hard to see where the Meighen party would secure any strong men from among its present lot of candidates, should all indications be reversed, and Mr. Meighen again given the reins of power.

Among the rank and file of the party there has been a general rush to get from under and appointments to the senate and the bench have been a matter of daily occurrence. And there are more of them yet to come, if indications run true to form. For months now Mr. Meighen has been besieged by a mob of office-seekers until his life was made almost a misery, and finally he sent half his old cabinet to the senate along with a few of the more persistent members of parliament, and took in a lot of new blood which does not seem at all likely to get him anywhere.

* * *

When Mr. King comes back to parliament he will have in his following such men as Fielding, McMaster, Lapointe, Lemieux, Beland, McKenzie, Graham, Kennedy, Pardee, Murphy and a host of others whose names stand out as among the leaders of progressive thought in the country. Material will be there for a cabinet of big men, who can guide this country through the trying times which have to be faced, and bring Canada back to a footing of prosperity. The pages of Hansard will show great difference between the parties of Mr. King and Mr. Meighen, and knowing that the present Prime Minister has no cabinet material behind him, even if he were returned to power, they have given up any idea of Mr. Meighen coming back. And so has he, if there is any truth in what his followers throughout the country are saying.

The Prime Minister is jumping about the country to such an extent that he is wearing himself out. At the finish of his Maritime tour his voice had given out and his health appeared to be poor. And then, without taking a rest of more than two days, he started out again on his twenty-second meeting in the Province of Ontario, apparently unfit for the task ahead of him. The Liberal chief, on the other hand, has been conserving his strength and his speeches improved with every meeting. At the finish of the campaign he will still be in condition to tackle the strenuous days ahead, with the support of the strong men of his party.

* * *

That the poster campaign of the Meighen party will be along the same lines as Mr. Meighen's speeches thus far, is evident from the posters which have been put out. In all of them appears, so far, the warning against "tariff tinkers" is conspicuous and the government seeks to lead the country to believe that if any other party is returned to power, Canada will lose some 45 per cent. of her revenues. The absurdity of such a claim is shown by the tariff speeches of Hon. Mr. King, who has pointed out that the Liberal party is not seeking Free Trade, but does demand tariff revision in the interests of producers and consumers alike.

"The implements and instruments of production in the basic industries" Mr. King stated "must be as free from taxation as it is possible to make them." Then there will be increased production in those basic industries and consequent development of the other industries dependent upon these. In regard to the necessaries of life there must be relief, as far as possible, from taxation. If a man can afford it and demands that his suits of clothes, for instance, be made in London and imported especially to Canada especially for him, then there is no reason why that man should not pay for those luxuries. But the workingman must not be taxed on his food and clothing and the other things which he must have in order to maintain a decent standard of living. When the tariff is revised, and I believe we will be called upon to revise it, we shall keep in mind the primary need of revenue, but our revision will be based upon the home and its needs, and not on the needs of a few specially privileged interests. That is the real difference between our tariff and Mr. Meighen's. His revision will be in the interest of his own friends.

How Doctors Die.

Even those enemies of death, the doctors, must die. How well do they resist the adversary? The Journal of the American Medical Association gives an interesting set of figures for last year. Of 2,272 physicians dying in the United States and Canada during 1920, whose age was stated, 37 were under 30; 174 between 31 and 40; 351 between 41 and 50; 463 between 51 and 60; 541 between 61 and 70; 486 between 71 and 80; 208 between 81 and 90, and 19 between 91 and 100. The greatest number of deaths for a given age occurred at 63 and 64 years, at each of which ages 57 physicians died. Of the deaths were noted, General diseases accounted for 257 deaths; disease of the nervous system, 271; diseases of the circulatory system, 462; diseases of the respiratory system, 266; diseases of the digestive system, 70; diseases of the genito-urinary system, 154; senility, 77; suicide, 32; accidents, 102; homicide, 14; and sequela to surgical operations, 74.

Rayfd's Daring Raid.

Pte. Walter L. Rayfield, of the 7th Battalion, now located at Los Angeles, Cal., but who was in Toronto for the gathering of V.C.'s at the big exhibition, won his V.C. by a particularly cool and daring feat of arms. It was at Arras in September, 1918.

Ahead of his company he rushed a trench occupied by a large party of the enemy, personally bayonetting two and taking ten prisoners. Later he located and engaged with great skill, under constant rifle fire, an enemy sniper who was causing many casualties. He then rushed the section of trench from which the sniper had been operating, and so demoralized the enemy by his coolness and daring that thirty others surrendered to him.

It's easy to own the AMBEROLA

Despite the fact that the Amberola actually surpasses in sweetness, and realism all of the so-called "talking machines", its price is unbelievably moderate. Because the permanent Diamond Point Reproducer does away with the bother and expense of changing needles, and because the Edison Amberol Records are practically indestructible, the Amberola is the most economical phonograph to maintain.

If you enjoy good music, and if you have refrained from investigating the Amberola because you naturally believe it to be expensive, come in today, ask us for full information. The low price of the Amberola will astonish you—particularly when you hear the convenient payment terms which we will be happy to arrange.

Three Days of Good Music—FREE!
Ask us how you can have the Amberola in your own home for three days—absolutely free, and without obligation to buy. If you can't come in—simply phone or write us a postcard.

A WOMAN PREACHER.

Miss A. Maude Royden In London Temple.

The instant success of Miss A. Maude Royden, when she preached her first sermon in the City Temple, London, Eng., and the continuous growth of her power since, constitute a notable chapter, not without romantic elements, in modern religious history, says the Quiver. When Rev. R. J. Campbell returned to the Church of England, his successor, Dr. Fort Newton, would preach only once a Sunday. Seeking some one for the other service, the Temple officials thought of Miss Royden, although she was a churchwoman and had never preached. As an experiment, she became pulpit assistant in September, 1917, continuing with growing acceptance until the end of 1919. In March, 1920, in conjunction with Rev. Percy Dearmer, D.D., she started services in Kensington Town Hall, founding the Fellowship Guild. For the week-day services the use of a church was sought from the Bishop of London, but, with real personal regret, he had to refuse.

In June of this year Ecclestone Square Congregational Church was secured and rechristened the Ecclestone Chapel-house. Numerous agencies for week-day work are being opened in the fine building. All is conducted on an interdenominational basis, churchmen and non-conformists retaining their affiliations, and seeking to interest those who dislike churches. Miss Royden preaches Sunday evenings with great power, it is said. For her task she was developed by university education and platform work in the suffrage movement. Her sympathies were deepened by work in social settlements after leaving Oxford. She cares remarkably little about criticism or notoriety. By nature she is an evangelist. While remaining loyal to the Church of England, she has broken away from the traditional theology. Her teaching is essentially practical, although she is "a bit of a mystic."

Born as Liverpool in 1876, she removed to the ancestral home, Frankby Hall, with her father, Sir Thomas Royden, Bart., sixteen years later. Her brother, who succeeded in 1917 to the baronetcy, is M.P. for one of the Bootle divisions, and deputy-chairman of the Cunard Steamship Company. Miss Royden has another brother and five sisters. Her education was commenced by governesses and continued at an old-fashioned school kept by four maiden ladies, who made stooping girls wear back-boards, and if their toes turned in put their feet into stocks. At Lady Margaret Hall, Oxford, her interests were literary and historical. Later she worked in the slums until broken down in health, and then became editor of the suffrage organ. And hence to the pulpit. She dislikes working in one centre only, and may soon be heard on this side of the water.

King George Fights a Salmon.

The tallest of fishermen's tall tales is surely the Frenchman's story of how King George fought a salmon. His majesty was the subject of a eulogistic article in the French press, and this is how the writer expressed his lively imagination.

"He is a sportsman of the first force, the King of Britain. Behold him there, as he sits motionless under his umbrella, patiently regarding his many-colored floats; how obstinately he contends with the elements! It is a summer day of Britain—that is to say, a day of sleet and fog and rainstorms. But what would you? It is as they love it, those who would follow the sport. Presently the king's float begins to descend. My God! but how he strikes! That hook is implanted in the very bowels of the salmon. The king rises. He spurns aside his footstool. He strides strongly and swiftly towards the rear. In good time the salmon comes to approach himself to the bank. Aha! the king has cast aside the rod. He hurls himself flat on the ground on his victim. They splash and struggle in the icy water. Name of a dog! But it is a brave laddie! The gillie, a kind of outdoor domestic, administers the coup de grace with his pistol. The king cries with a very shrill voice, 'Hip, hip, hurrah!' and then red letter days, his majesty the king dines on a haggis and a whisky grog. Like a true Scotsman, he wears only a kilt."

Hobson's Fine Heroism.

He did not live to wear the V.C. that he so splendidly won, but the kinsfolk of Sergt. Fred Hobson, 20th Battalion, Toronto, treasure the medal as the proudest of their possessions, for the daring deed of the soldier was as fine a single-handed feat of arms as the war has recorded. During a strong enemy counter-attack, a Lewis gun in a forward post in a communication trench leading to the enemy lines, was buried by a shell and the crew, with the exception of one man, killed, Sergt. Hobson, though not a gunner, grasped the great importance of the post, rushed from the trench, dug out the gun, and got it into action against the enemy who were now advancing down the trench and across the open.

A jam caused the gun to stop firing. Though wounded, he left the gunner to correct the stoppage, rushed forward at the advancing enemy and, with bayonet and clubbed rifle, single-handed held them back until he himself was killed by a rifle shot. By this time, however, the Lewis gun was again in action, and reinforcements shortly afterwards arriving, the enemy were beaten off.

Prince and the Packer.

Stories of the Prince of Wales' life at the front illustrate his thoroughness and his conscientiousness where duty is concerned. In "Our Prince," Mr. Edward Legge tells how some of the packers of rations were occasionally in a lazy mood, and when counting the packets skipped numbers, a result of this indolence being that the men in the trenches went short of their rations. "Twenty-five," said a packer one day when the prince was superintending the work. "I make it twenty," remarked the prince. "Unload the wagon and count the packets again." The prince insisted, too, on facing the dangers which his brother officers underwent. Once the officer in charge ordered the prince to leave the danger zone, but he made such a "rumpus" about this command that it was never enforced again.

HOW TIMES CHANGE.

Looking Back 100 Years In Life of Ontario.

One hundred years ago Reuben Crandell began the settlement of Reach Township, starting to clear the farm now owned by Mr. Peter Christie, says the Port Perry Star. One hundred years ago land was bought at one dollar an acre, and immense pines grew everywhere on the high lands, together with splendid maples, while giant cedars, hemlocks, and tamaracs covered the lowlying country.

All that timber is gone now. Most of it was burnt up. When Mr. Rolph built his house at Prince Albert, he bought excellent pine lumber for $6 a thousand delivered on the lot, and the carpenter worked for a dollar a day, making the whole house, joining the flooring, making the doors and window sashes. Now rough pine lumber is $70 a thousand, and carpenters earn $5 or more a day.

Of course, in those days a 200 pound pig only cost $10, eggs were 10 cents a dozen and butter 10 cents a pound. There were no movies, no autos, no telephones, no barber shops. Life was a very simple matter, and the greatest luxury was a good night's sleep after a hard day's work.

One hundred years ago Indians and wild animals held possession, and it was no uncommon sight to see a bear on the road, or hear the wolves howl.

All this has changed. Now we have a well cleared and prosperous country, noted for its splendid farms and excellent stock. We have good roads. Of course, they could be better, but they are as different as daylight is from darkness. Oh those terrible swamps, those endless stretches of corduroy, those hills that stood on end. Small wonder that the driver of the plodding ox-team should want many places of refreshment along the road, and the 24 hotels that did business in Reach township in the early days were not considered too many.

We have improved in our material wealth, we have lovely homes, fine schools and churches, and all modern comforts; but it will be hard to improve on the industry, courage and self-sacrifice of the pioneers who cleared our farms and started civilization here a hundred years ago.

Historic Cricket Balls.

It is one of the unwritten laws of county cricket that the man who touches the ball last in a match can claim it as a souvenir, and there must be many balls preserved throughout the country which have interesting histories.

Abel had the good fortune to secure the ball used in the England vs. Australia match at the Oval in August, 1896. He brought the game to an end by catching the last man, and as he walked to the pavilion with the ball in his hand he received many tempting offers for the souvenir.

The Abel family, too, possess a ball, mounted on an ebony stand, with which "E.M." took every wicket in the second innings of a match between Gentlemen of Kent and the M.C.C. at Canterbury in 1862. "E.M." on that occasion, in addition to his bowling feat, went in first and scored 192 not out.

Protecting a Bank.

The Bank of England has a water guard and water insurance on its huge supply of gold bullion. The bullion is lowered into a deep well at night, the safety fixtures being so arranged that if the funds in the vault or well change position at night or are decreased in weight a stream of water spouts forth in the guardroom.

An Unclean Mattress is a Menace to Health

Canada has no Dominion-wide pure bedding laws—nothing but the conscience of the maker to assure you of mattresses well-built—sanitary all the way through.

Did you ever wonder where all the old mattresses went? A great many of them are made up into new mattresses so when buying a new mattress be sure and demand of your dealer that he guarantees the interior to be made of new, clean, sanitary materials.

WE DO NOT ALLOW A MATTRESS TO ENTER OUR STORE THAT IS NOT MADE OF NEW MATERIAL and we have no connection whatever with any manufacturer who makes over old mattresses.

During the month of November we are having a special showing of all Felt Mattresses. The time is here when you can buy an all Felt Mattress for a few dollars more than the price of a sea-grass mattress.

The prices during November are very attractive in order to induce you to discard that old, lumpy, hard mattress, and get a soft, clean one that will give you pleasant, restful sleep. One third of your life is spent in bed, so why not have a comfortable mattress?

$14.00 is the price of our leader. It is all layer felt with a stitched roll edge.

$16.50 and $20.00 Mattresses have exceptionally strong ticking.

$16.50 buys a Kapok Mattress.

The celebrated "OSTERMOOR" at $25.00.

By looking in ou show windows you will see the Felt that is made into mattresses.

ORGANIZED BIG PLANT

GEORGE CHAHOON, JR. IS A NATURALIZED CANADIAN.

He Came to the Dominion From the United States and Has Done Great Work In Connection With the Laurentide Co. at Grand Mere In Province of Quebec.

An outstanding example of the not inconsiderable number of men born in the United States who have become prominent figures in the commercial life of Canada is Mr. George Chahoon, Jr., president of the Laurentide Co., Ltd., of Grand Mere, Que. The concern over which he presides is one of the very biggest paper mills in Canada and enjoys a world-wide reputation.

Mr. Chahoon was born in Ausable Forks, New York, some forty-seven years ago, and has lived in this country nearly twenty of those years. His father was formerly a well known senator, who was connected with one of the first sulphite mills in the United States. George, Jr., when quite a youth, went to work at Glen Falls, one of the locations of the International Paper Co. He worked his way up through the mills to such good purpose that, when he was only about twenty-five years old, he was appointed superintendent of the Northern New York mills.

After filling this position for some three years, he was appointed general manager of the Laurentide Co. in 1902, and subsequently he became also its president. The growth of the business under his direction has been phenomenal. He himself is a glutton for work, and, as he is a rare judge of capacity in other men, he has associated with himself men of marked business acumen and progressive tendencies. During the war he acted as business manager of the department for manufacturing gas shells and poison gases at the Edgewood Arsenal in Baltimore.

Grand Mere, which is nearly 100 miles from Montreal, on the north side of the St. Maurice river, is a town of about 7,000 inhabitants. The company of which Mr. Chahoon is president, in addition to the force of 4,500 woodsmen which it maintains to cut the trees for the annual supply of pulpwood, employs nearly 2,000 people in its mills. These latter all live in the town, so that the population is practically composed of the Laurentide employes and their families. The utmost credit is due to George Chahoon for the fact that Grand Mere, the development of which is so largely owing to him, is pretty nearly a model own—something like a modern industrial Utopia wherein to live and work.

No finer houses are on sale worth developing as Grand Mere. It had the advantage of a wonderfully beautiful landscape and extremely good, generous surroundings, to begin with. And these were made the most of. There has been no meddling and muddling, but under the guidance of a well-known landscape engineer, something like fairyland has been brought about with a huge hill in the offing. Parks have been laid out. Houses galore of really artistic design have been erected. In one lovely park, in particular, there are several fine new houses, mostly occupied by heads and near-heads of various departments. The company runs its own real estate department, which manages the houses it owns. It also runs a dairy of forty cows or so and a model farm, which supply farm and dairy produce to the employes.

There is a very sporting 18-hole golf course with a first-rate and most delightful club house belonging to it donated by Mrs. Chahoon. The company has provided, for the benefit of the town, two tennis courts and a skating rink. It has also built a club and assembly hall, where concerts are held and where lovers of the "light fantastic" may trip it to their hearts' content. The company boasts a circulating library. The company also owns and operates a first-class hotel with all modern conveniences—except a bar—even though Grand Mere be in Quebec Province. In the mill, by the way, there is a cafeteria, where the employes can get a sandwich for five cents, a cup of tea for two and a half cents and other edibles and potables at similarly low rates. The company's employes have a fine baseball team, with quite a wide renown, and a most excellent band composed of some fifty men and boys, both English-speaking and French-speaking. Thus at Grand Mere there is no fear of all work and no play making Jack—or Jean either, for that matter—a dull boy.

The great majority of the people are French-Canadians, with their own separate schools, but, for the benefit of those youngsters who do not "parley-voo," the company maintains a school in its general offices, where a night school is also conducted.

Unemployment is practically unknown at Grand Mere. When a man's services are not required in one department every endeavor is made to find work for him in another.

Labor troubles are unknown at Grand Mere. If a controversy arises between the management and the men, the matter is cleared up by a conference between Mr. Chahoon, who is the most approachable of men, and the priest, to whom the men entrust their side of the case. But Mr. Chahoon, in addition to his organizing ability, has a genius for equitable administration. It would certainly be hard to find another industrial community anywhere where improved natural advantages and comfortable conditions render employment more attractive.

MEN ARE MORE CRIMINAL

What Returns Taken In City of Toronto Indicate.

The invasion of the business world by women has not been accompanied by any notable increase in female crime.

The breaking-down of those conventions and barriers which were supposed to preserve women from contact with the sophisticated world has not resulted in a criminal development to equal man.

In the police reports of 1920, which covers the larger part of the crime wave of last winter, 24,503 crimes were committed in Toronto by men as against only 2,301 committed by women.

Of the four cases of murder and twenty-seven cases of manslaughter for last year, none were by women. For drunkenness, the largest crime, 5,872 men were arrested and only 258 women. For theft, 1,929 men and 282 women; house and shopbreaking, 537 men and four women; breach of the Ontario Temperance Act, 1,263 men and 174 women; fraud, 308 men and 44 women; forgery, 25 men and two women; receiving stolen goods, 119 men and 25 women.

Most remarkable item of all is that of disorderly houses and dives of various sorts, an offense generally laid at women's doors. But in this crime, the men again outnumber women. For keeping and frequenting such places, 251 men and only 123 women were taken in.

There are supposed to be more women than men in Toronto. Yet men have by overwhelming majority the lead in crime. The so-called "emancipation" of women in the past generation has not affected their temperament or psychological make-up.

Even in secondary position to crime, as abettors or silent partners, women play a negligible part. In the great gang of bank hold-up men captured last winter in Toronto, two members of which were sentenced to death for murder, no woman was remotely connected with the deeds of these men. In fact, it is definitely known to the police that the mothers, sweethearts and other womenfolk of these young men had not the remotest idea of the evil doings of their men.

In one case out in the province, a gang was known to be accompanied on its depredations by women. These girls, however, were of an extremely sophisticated type.

Women are too emotional, criminals say, to make good confidantes or accomplices in crime.

By far the greatest majority of women commit one and only one crime and then are reformed completely. But by the same token, when a woman commits more than one crime, she is almost certain to be a confirmed "repeater" for life. Her emotional nature is such as to respond violently to reform. But if that emotional reaction is lacking, her character is weaker and does not resist temptation.

"I doubt," said a senior police official, "if the entering into business and industrial life will have any illeffect on women. On the whole, it will improve their manners. They are not built, mentally or spiritually, for crime. Their practical experience of business will contribute generally to reduce crimes of passion and malice. And the placing of women in positions of trust will, in addition, tend to reduce the proportion of crimes of greed, embezzlement, theft, fraud, and so on."

Innocence of the kind extolled by the lady novelists of a generation ago may be a virtue, but its passing before the modern idea of womanhood is not, apparently, to be regretted.

EGGS ON ENGLISH CLIFFS.

Flamborough Head Is the Scene of Picturesque Occupation.

Climbing for sea birds' eggs along the ten miles of splendid cliffs called Flamborough Head in Yorkshire, England, is an industry rather than a sport. In early summer the sea is almost covered for great distances with the birds, which nest high up in the limestone ledges, making a tremendous splutter as they fly about in myriads. For this reason the hundred years the tenant farmers adjacent have made full use of the right of harvesting the eggs regularly and selling them at a profit. The cliffs are sublet to "climmers," of whom there are four sets, each of four men.

The climbing apparatus consists of two stout bags to hold the eggs; a long stick with net at one end and hook at the other to rake out the eggs of razorbills and puffins from crevices, and some tackle to assist climbing.

The lowerer lets the climber down easily, being accommodated with by the so-called hand rope. It takes three men to pull the man up. The climber performs great feats of agility in walking along the almost perpendicular edges and reaching about for nests. As many as thirty descents are made in a day. In good weather each nest is examined twice a week to ensure freshness.

From a study of the markings and shapes of eggs it is learned that the same bird returns to the same nest and lays the same shape of egg year after year for as many as thirteen years. Nowadays the cheapest varieties are for collectors, others for the great hotels, and the great majority for dressing finer classes of leather. Guillemots, a northern sea bird, are the most numerous variety.

Dies of Paint Fumes.

TORONTO, Oct. 24.—Wm. Price, of Mount Dennis, died on Saturday at the plant of the Allis-Chalmers Co., Ltd., as the result of inhaling paint fumes, it is generally thought, before the physician could be used on him. Another workman was also overcome, but was revived.

Seal Hunting by Aeroplane

It seems that the airman will try anything—not once, but as often as is necessary to insure triumph. The record of his work in the war is something at which this generation will not cease to marvel, and the large part he has played and is playing in advancing industry and commerce since the war is an endless revelation of unexplored possibilities. The latest advance is in helping the sealer off the Labrador coast. This new romance of aviation is interestingly described by Edgar C. Middleton in the Illustrated London News:

Belle Isle is the centre of the great seal fisheries. There the seals pass the winter. There the flippers—young seals—are born, and from there, as the ice begins to break up with the spring, they and their parents come floating southwards on huge blocks of ice. Every year, regular as clockwork, towards the end of February, between March 21 and March 25, the entire seal nursery arrives off Fogo, where the sealing fleet waits their arrival.

The actual bagging of the seals is a comparatively simple matter. Immediately they are sighted the entire ship's company take to the boats and, clambering on to the ice, club the seals over the head, skin them and haul their skins and fat back to the ships, at the rate of thousands a day.

Like the old proverb, though, you must first catch your seal "before you sell his skin." In these vast seas it is no easy matter to track down even an army of 100,000 seals. From the time that the ice-floes start down until the seals take to deep water again, far beyond the hunters' reach, is only a matter of a few weeks at most. In that brief spell either the sealers have made their catch or they return to harbor empty-handed for another year's work.

Sealing is one of the mainstays of the island. A bad season entails much poverty and hardship, and during the last few years of the war the sealing business went from bad to worse. Another bad season would have meant bankruptcy for the sealing fleet and so the men in the wonderful observational powers of the aircraft.

On a clear day, and from a height of 5,000 feet, the airmen had a view over the ice that extended to Belle Island, 150 miles away. At that same altitude it was possible to make out the dog teams on the surface of the ice below with the naked eye. Usually, however, the weather conditions the sealers had to contend were little short of appalling. For the most part the temperature stood at zero or below. Frequently they were forced to bring the machine down on to the ice, while a great deal of their time was spent in dodging blizzards—a the first sign turning their tactics for the time at full speed. Had they been overtaken by one they would never have returned to tell the tale.

Last sealing season the gales were the worst within living memory of the islanders. The inhabitants took to their beds and did not emerge forth again till the full fury of the storm had vented itself. All the trains were snowed up for over a month, and the railway was the only means of transport available. In the midst of the sealing work an urgent wire was received from the Postmaster-General of Newfoundland to fly out with a mail bag to St. Anthony, an outlying island. Despite a heavy storm, the bag was delivered, and the plane returned again in safety.

The machine that Mr. Cotton was flying was a Westland, fitted with a Napier-Lion engine. He had chosen machine he made his famous flight 320 miles out and home across the icefields.

That day they carried an experienced sealing captain aboard, and he was able to track down the seals by certain signs on the ice surface. It was encrusted all over with low, blunt ridges, or "pancake" ice. The prevailing wind was westerly, and, as neither of these conditions was conducive to a lair for young seals, he came to the conclusion that they had passed below a few hours previously and were now drifting out to sea in search of deep water. Shortly after they flew near the sealing fleet itself. They signalled to it by wireless: "Turn about! Sail east! The seals have passed below and are now making for the open sea." The sealers took the hint. Within twenty-four hours their catch totalled 110,000 seals.

Meanwhile, warned by change of wind and gathering clouds that a dreaded blizzard was approaching the airplane turned for home at top speed. Barely had the airmen got the machine within its hangar before the blizzard broke, which in the space of hours piling up many feet of snow against the doors.

Nothing daunted by these adventures, Mr. Cotton is off again in a few weeks' time for Newfoundland. Next sealing they anticipate being at work weeks before the ships go out, and in the meantime are to give the fishermen a hand in spotting cod and take a turn with the whalers, out after the sperm and finbacked whales. An aerial mail service across the bay to Labrador is yet another experiment at which they are going to try their hand during the summer months.

Seamless Steel Boats.

Seamless boats are now moulded out of thin steel. A plate of the metal is run into a huge hydraulic press, which forces or stamps it into the form of a boat, and turns it out virtually ready for the sea.

HAMILTON.

City Was Called After a Man Born In Canada.

Hamilton is almost unique among Canadian cities, in that it was named after a person born in Canada, George Hamilton, who was a native of Queenston, Ontario.

While Hamilton founded the city as it was not the first white person to view the site. La Salle, the great French explorer, viewed the site of Hamilton as early as 1669, when he sailed into Burlington Bay and explored the land beneath the Mountain. The pioneer settler in the district was Robert Land, who came to Canada when the American colonies declared their independence from Great Britain. He built a log cabin on Burlington Bay and soon other settlers gathered in the district. By 1791 there were 31 farms in the territory.

Then came George Hamilton. He was a son of the Hon. Robert Hamilton, once a great citizen of Dumfries, Scotland, but he was born on the Niagara frontier and moved to what is now Toronto when he was three months old. His father, the first resident day Hamilton. He built his house and called his new home Wellington, in an attempt at naming the community.

In the following year Hamilton laid out his farm in village lots, for other settlers coming to the land and the group of farms became a hamlet. He named the village he created Hamilton to perpetuate his own name. That was the year when Gen. Vincent retired from Niagara to Burlington Heights in advance of the victory at Stoney Creek.

Few cities in Canada have had such a consistent steady growth as Hamilton. When the first railroad in Canada—the Cobourg-Peterborough—came to Hamilton in 1841 there were 3,446 people in the community. In the next nine years the population grew to 10,312, and since then the growth has been gradual but unceasing.

Eskimo Seal Hunters.

The following account of the Eskimos winter hunt for seal is given in the Beaver, a house organ of the Hudson Bay Company:

The Eskimo leaves his snow house (igloo) with a husky dog. The dog smells out the seal and indicates to his master the location of the seal's breathing hole. It happens when the ice is forming that a seal will nose a hole in the forming ice so that he can breathe when it is frozen over. The churning of the water, together with the heat of the seal's body during the thickening of the ice, keeps a hole in the ice large enough for a nose for the seal so that he may rest and breathe. An air vent through the roof of his dome-like house permits the escape of his carbonic exhalations, but the snows, beating like ice particles on the top, covers over the chimney as it were, making it necessary to hunt the seal's home with a dog.

The Eskimo, having located the whereabouts of the seal, enlarges the chimney hole in the ice about the size of his wrist and drops through this an apparatus or "seal indicator," which when the seal comes up will rise. The indicator thus shows the Eskimo that the seal is at home. Then he simply makes a thrust with his short spear which is anchored with a stout piece of sealskin thong. The seal immediately dives, and being anchored by the sealskin rope, drowns itself. Then the Eskimo draws him in, enlarges the opening in the ice and pulls out his seal.

A New Fuel.

The Japanese chemists have been experimenting with a colloidal fluid for fuel that displaces both coal and oil and bids fair to revolutionize shipping because of its intense heat and the small space in which the supply for the cruise may be stored.

Liquor Laws of B.C.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., has adopted newspaper work as a profession, and as newspaper reporters go, he is counted rich. Much of his work so far has been done in Canada for American publications, and we noted the other day that he had the great satisfaction of acting as caddy for Lord Northcliffe. Like other Americans, he has been fascinated by the operations of the British Columbia liquor law. As a man not unfamiliar with large money transactions, he has looked into the question of profits, and learns that the Government is making about $25,000 a day net, the year's revenue being estimated at about $9,000,000. This, it will be admitted even in these days of inflation, is a comfortable sum for a Government to have on hand, especially when it knows that the people who have contributed it feel that they have got their money's worth. The large profit made by the Government will prove a potent argument if the question is again revived of depriving the citizens of their potables.

Last fall the people of British Columbia voted upon the prohibition issue and declared themselves in favor of Government control, but it was not until April that the Government was prepared its scheme and put it into force. The business is in the hands of three commissioners, and, as we understand, as we learn on the authority of Mr. Vanderbilt, by the "Lieutenant-Governor-General of Canada, who at present resides in Toronto. This board determines the number and location of liquor stores, the prices for which the liquor is to be sold and all other matters pertaining thereto, just like the Ontario License Board. The stores are recognizable by blue and white signs flying over them, the blue presumably representing austerity and the white purity. The interiors are described by Mr. Vanderbilt as somewhat resembling those of wine stores in France, the walls being lined with shelves and the shelves densely populated with bottles.

The liquor can be sold only to persons having a permit to buy, but apparently anyone can get a permit who is not a child or legal ass. There are three different permits. A person who has lived in the province for a month can buy a permit for fifty cases, which will entitled him to buy two quarts of strong liquor and twelve quarts of beer. He can buy these as often as he cares to. Or when he has lived in the province for three months he graduates into another class, and by paying $2, which goes to the province, he buys and unlimited quantities of beer. When he has been there six months he receives a sort of degree which enables him to buy unlimited quantities of all kinds of liquor. He parts with $5 for this privilege. Visitors are given special permits, which entail three days' residence. The object of these fees obviously is to encourage persons to settle in British Columbia, not to discourage them.

The new law, we are informed, has reduced charges of drunkenness and vagrancy by 20 per cent. The police constitute a force of the fast that penalties for the infraction of the law are extremely severe. One can be sent to jail for three months for intoxication, and if a man violates any provision of the act is liable to a six-months' sentence for a first offence, and for subsequent offences, anywhere up to twenty-six months, and not less than a year. No person, of course, may sell liquor, except druggists, who are permitted to dispense it. Liquor may be had also on doctors' prescriptions. Liquor can be drunk only on private premises. The guests are permitted to imbibe, but must do so in their rooms. Drinking in the rotundas has been abolished.

The police seem to have been given unusual powers. They can search suspected premises or suspected persons without warrant, and if resistance is offered they can break locks and make arrests. Their mere suspicions are sufficient warrant. Moreover, they can search for and seize upon any person who has imbibed liquor to excess dies by accident or suicide the person who furnished him with liquor can be fined in an amount not less than $100 and not more than $1,500. The prices charged by the Government seem rather high when compared with those charged by the Ontario License Board. Beer averages about $4 a case for imported and $3 for domestic. Whiskey and red wines, sherry, port and liqueurs range from $2 to $6 a bottle. Gin sells for $3, rum at $4, and whiskey at from $3 to $5 a reputed quart. These prices explain the $25,000 daily net profit.

The Speaker's Chair.

The Speaker's chair is a very substantial piece of furniture, with its canopy, sounding board, writing accommodation, arms and quiver for the pens, and of the permanent fittings of the House of Commons as are the benches or galleries. But it was not always thus. The office of Speaker of the British House of Commons used to carry with it sundry little emoluments additional to the salary, as a buck and doe every year from Windsor, and a service of plate. Also, at the end of each Parliament, it was customary for the Speaker and his wife to be presented in armchair in which he had sat as president, and the practice was discontinued only in 1832.

HOW WOMEN AVOID SURGICAL OPERATIONS

Some Are Extremely Necessary, Others May Not Be

Every Woman Should Give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Trial First

Chicago, Ill.—"I was in bed with a female trouble and inflammation and had four doctors but none of them did me any good. They all said I would have to have an operation. A druggist's wife told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took 22 bottles, never missing a dose and at the end of that time I was perfectly well. I have never had occasion to take it again as I have been so well. I have a nice room fat and do all my work. My two sisters are taking the Compound upon my recommendation and you may publish my letter, it is the gospel truth and I will write to any one who wants a personal letter."—Mrs. E. H. HAYDOCK, 6824 St. Lawrence Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Vermont woman adds her testimony to the long line of those fortunate women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after it had been decided an operation was necessary:

Burlington, Vt.—"I suffered with female trouble, and had a number of doctors who said that I would never be any better until I had an operation. I was so bad I could hardly walk across the floor and could not do a thing. My sister-in-law induced me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it certainly has helped me wonderfully. I keep house and do my work and have a small child. I have recommended Vegetable Compound to a number of my friends and you may publish my testimonial."—Mrs. H. R. SHARON, Apple Tree Point Farm, Burlington, Vt.

In hospitals are many women who are there for surgical operations, and there is nothing a woman dreads more than the thought of an operation, and the long weary months of recovery and restoration to strength if it is successful.

It is very true that female troubles may through neglect reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but most of the commoner ailments of women are not in the surgical zone; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same. When disturbing ailments first appear take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve the present distress and prevent more serious troubles. In fact, many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after operations have been advised by attending physicians.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent to you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

SIX KINDS OF GULLS.

Graceful Birds Always Found Near Bodies of Water.

The long-winged, graceful sea gulls, whether floating on the waters or winging their way through the skies, are the very embodiment of poise and wild freedom. Now is the time to begin to study them, for they are coming to us from the north, where they have had their nests. Six species will be common this general locality. They are, in order of size, the black-backed, herring, ring-billed, laughing, kittiwake and Bonaparte's gulls.

Although they never nest so far south, some non-breeding herring gulls are with us all summer, especially along the ocean. These are usually young birds, more or less mottled, dark brownish gray all around, or birds of immediate age with the variously mixed plumage, but there is also an occasional white adult with pearl gray mantle and black, white-spotted wing tips.

In July laughing gulls, which have nested on islets to the east, appear in some parts of Canada. White adults have black heads and dark gray mantles. When they moult the head becomes white, but the dark mantle, combined with small size, is diagnostic. Young laughing gulls are very dark, except the belly, which is abruptly white, contrasting with the breast, and the base of the tail, which is also white. Until September this is frequently the most abundant gull.

In August ring-billed gulls, intermediate between the herring and laughing gull in size, arrive along the ocean bays and beaches and outnumber the herring gulls there for a time. Adults are almost identical with adult herring gulls in plumage, but have a black band across the bill and greenish or yellowish instead of pinkish feet. In September the flocks of herring gulls come down from the north, and from now on this species outnumbers all others combined. It is the one found in the harbor and the rivers in winter.

The black-backed gull, a big bird with a slaty black mantle, and the kittiwake, common out at sea, seldom seen from the shore, arrive late. The Bonaparte's gull, our smallest species, with a fluttering flight, is rarely common only in fall and early winter. It has a white stripe in the front of the wing, which will aid in its identification.

A Long-Lived Family.

The reunion of the Gamsby family was held recently at the home of L. C. Shugill, of Ingersoll, and proved to be an event of more than ordinary interest. The eight brothers and sisters were together for the first time in many years, and the following list of their ages was prepared: D. A. Gamsby, Toronto, 86 years, 2 months and 2 days; Mrs. E. H. Foster, Salford, 84 years, 2 months and 2 days; A. A. Gamsby, Orono, 82 years, 4 months and 12 days; Mrs. H. M. Turner, Bedford, 93 years, 4 months and 12 days; Mrs. A. B. Henry, Southampton, 75 years, 3 months and 20 days; Mrs. M. J. Henry, Upland, Cal., 70 years, 3 months and 9 days; Mrs. E. V. Willoughby, Georgetown, 67 years, 3 months; C. E. Gamsby, Upland, Cal., 65 years, 7 months and 15 days—an average age of more than 77 years.

Obituary.

The passing away of Geo. M. Exley, on Friday morning, October 14th, at his late residence in South Napanee, has been deeply felt by a large circle of relatives and friends. Mr. Exley had been in failing health for about six months, having had a serious operation in June, from which he recovered sufficiently to be up and around. In August he went to Toronto for special treatment, coming home in September. He was active up to the last three weeks before his death, keeping his bed the greater part of the time. He suffered but little and was always able to take his meals regularly. His pastor, Rev. Dr. Shorey, and Dr. Simpson, who went often to see him, knew he was failing, but always found him cheerful, putting all faith in his Master, and able to say, "Thy will be done." The end came calm and peaceful. His home has always been in Napanee, and from boyhood to manhood always lived an honest and upright life, and was esteemed by all who knew him. He leaves a sorrowing wife, two daughters, Georgina and Edna, and little George, besides two brothers, James, of Canandaiqua, N.Y., and Walter, of Napanee, and one sister, Georgina Harper, Toronto. The funeral at Trinity church on Sunday afternoon was largely attended, relatives coming from Belleville, Toronto, Shannonville, Tweed and Flinton. The funeral was conducted by Rev. S. J. Shorey, who spoke with esteem of George, whom he knew so well. The "Dead March in Saul" was played by Prof. Baird, after which the choir rendered the favorite hymns of the deceased. The casket was covered with beautiful flowers, there being a floral harp from the brother and sister; a cross from wife and children ; wreath from W. A. Steacy and family ; spray from Mr. and Mrs. Chas. D. Black ; spray from Sunday school class ; spray from Citizens' Band ; and wreath from Canadian Order of Foresters. The casket was carried to the church entrance where the C. O. F. held a service, conducted by Mr. A. E. Paul and Mr. Geo. Walters, each member of the lodge taking part. The pall bearers were Messrs. F. Perry, W. Bowen, G. Grass, A. Ford, H. Steacy, and A. Caton. The remains were then taken to Riverside cemetery and laid to rest.

Curling Club Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Napanee Curling Club was held at the Club House on Friday evening last and the following officers were elected for the coming season :

President—W. A. Steacy.
Vice-President—F. C. Bogart.
Secretary-Treas.—G. P. Carr.
Treasurer—C. I. Maybee.
Executive—W. A. Daly, W. C. Smith, P. C. Killorin, H. Daly, M. Taylor, J. J. Boyes, T. Blute, R. A. Leonard.
Ice Committee—W. C. Smith, P. C. Killorin, J. H. S. Derry, T. Blute.
Representatives to the Central Ontario Curling League—Messrs. C. I. Maybee, W. C. Smith.
Representatives to the Ontario Curling Association—Messrs. R. A. Leonard, G. P. Carr.
Schedule Committee—Messrs. C. I. Maybee, C. H. Lapum, H. W. Huffman. This committee has full power to frame rules and regulations covering inter-rink games.

The selection of skips for the Tankard rinks, District Cup rinks and Inter-Club games was left in the hands of the Executive.

The skips for the inter-rink matches will be elected by the members of the club at a special meeting called for that purpose.

The membership list is now open and members intending to join are requested to hand in their names to Mr. G. P. Carr.

The treasurer's report showed that it cost approximately $700 to run the Curling Club, and as the fee must be fixed to produce this income, it follows that the greater number of members the less the individual fee. As soon as the membership list is closed the annual fee will be set, and members advised accordingly.

Woodsmen's Lingo.

Workmen in the great woods of British Columbia, have a language all their own that is not understood by the uninitiated.

A "faller" is the workman who "falls" the trees, and a good faller can always fall his tree so that it will drive a stake that he has previously set into the ground.

A "bucker" saws the tree into logs and the process is called "bucking a log." A "sawyer" always works in the lumber mill, and he saws the logs into lumber.

The "hooktender" in a logging camp puts the chain around the logs so they may be hauled in with a donkey engine. A "chaser" follows the log as it is being dragged in, a "swamper" keeps the roadway clear for the logs, and a "swiper" cuts off the sharp corners of the logs so they will drag more easily. A "choker" is she cable line placed about a log.

A "high-rigger" in a logging camp is the workman who goes up the logging mast to place "high lines" from the donkey engine. The "skid greaser" puts grease upon skid roads so the logs will slide more readily. The "whistle punk" operates the donkey engine whistle and signals the workmen with it. A "donkey" is a stationary engine with cables that long ago replaced oxen in log handling in the West.

A "boom" is a number of logs in the water held in place by "boom sticks."

In former times the word "bull fighter" was commonly heard. It applied to the man in a logging camp who had demonstrated his superiority with his fists in numerous encounters with his fellow workers. This expression is no longer heard loggers say, because fighting in logging camps is a pastime in which workmen no longer indulge. A fight is now a rare occurrence in the woods of the coast.

Newsboy Now Show Producer.

Isn't it wonderful how many actors are Toronto native sons, just as long as they are playing in Toronto? Most towns "fall" for that sort of thing. Once in a while it happens to be true. There are circumstantial details which link George White, the theatrical producer, with Toronto. He was born in New York, according to the story, and at the age of seven conspired with his parents to break the child labor laws by selling "poipers" on the streets of Toronto. With the crowd awaiting the newspaper delivery wagons he found buck dancing popular and began to practice it. Between the ages of 7 and 11 he did all sorts of odd jobs, selling Union Jacks on holidays, peddling balloons and dancing occasional steps in barrooms and on Solman's ferry boats to the Island.

At 11 he ran away to Buffalo and then to Detroit, and so to the Windsor race track, where he got a job exercising horses. He lost his job at Latonia and had to ride the box cars back to New York. There he became a messenger boy, and in a dance hall one day while delivering a telegram saw a coon thrown a few coins for dancing. George asked for his chance and got more coins than his rival. His professional career as a dancer had begun. His name was altered from Weitz to White and soon he won all sorts of prizes as an amateur. At fourteen he teamed up with Bennie Ryan, passing up through burlesque into musical comedy. At 29 he heads his third annual revue, "Scandals," a field in which only he and Alexander have rivalled Ziegfeld.

$1,500 for Most Perfect Back.

DETROIT, Oct. 31.—Fifteen hundred dollars for the "most perfect back in America" is to be given the winner of a contest to be opened under the auspices of the National League for Prevention of Spinal Curvature.

Announcement of the contest is made by Dr. F. P. Millard of Toronto, president of the league, to the Michigan Osteopathic Society, which opens its convention here this week.

Conventions are to be held by Indiana and Ontario Osteopathic Societies from November 7th, and prominent speakers will make a circuit from South Bend, Ind., to Detroit and Toronto.

Ireland Long Ago.

In the time of King John that part of Ireland which was subject to English rule was divided into twelve counties, and the entire district was known as the Pale. From this originated the expression "beyond the pale," meaning outside the law or beyond jurisdiction. Inside the Pale English law was acknowledged and obeyed, while the land outside was in an almost constant state of uproar and dissension.

GALE ON ATLANTIC.

Schooner and Two Steamers Ashore Off Cape Breton.

SYDNEY, N.S., Oct. 31.—An unknown three-masted schooner is ashore in Mira Bay, two small steamers were washed ashore in Sydney harbor and a great victory of motor cars resulted from the worst gale Cape Breton has experienced for several years.

The wind blew with fury up the length of the bay pitching such a sea that the waves broke completely over the wharves at Westmount, opposite the city and nearly ten miles down the harbor mouth.

Owing to the fact that wire communication with the Mira district has been cut off, Marine Department officials were unable to ascertain the identity of the wrecked schooner. It is said her crew landed safely and are being cared for.

Two former Canadian naval drifters broke from their moorings and came ashore at Neighi Beach, above the city. Minor damage along the Sydney waterfront included the carrying away of motor boats and other small craft. In the city several chimneys were blown down and many windows were broken.

At North Sydney the force of the waves carried away a portion of Queen street, while the wharf of the Cape Breton Electric Company was badly damaged and numerous small craft along the waterfront sank or were washed ashore.

A TROUBLESOME HAPSBURG

British Will Take Charge of Ex-Emperor Karl.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 31.— Representatives of the powers have handed to Foreign Minister Banffy a note from the Ambassadors' Council expressing satisfaction at the Hungarian Government's firmness in preventing the entry of Charles into the capital and his restoration to the throne. The note invited the Hungarian Government to place Charles in the hands of the British squadron.

Representatives of the Little Entente insisted verbally to the Foreign Minister that the Government take immediate measures to eliminate the house of Hapsburg.

Whether or not former King Charles will sign a writ of abdication is the great question prevailing in Hungary to-day. The feeling here is that if Charles does not comply with the request to abdicate, although the National Assembly should pass a resolution dethroning him, there will be a constitutional wrangle.

Bailiff After Him.

BORNE, Oct. 31.—A bailiff visited Hertenstein on Saturday for the purpose of executing an attachment against property of former King Charles for 50,000 francs in favor of the Swiss Airplane Company, in one of the planes of which Charles made his recent flight into Hungary.

TARIFF PLANK CHANGED.

Independent Labor Convention Makes Important Move.

HAMILTON, Ont., Oct. 31.—The Independent Labor party of Ontario, at a special convention at Hamilton Saturday, turned down the tariff reduction plank placed in its platform at the London, Ont., convention in 1920, and substituted one calling for the appointment of a commission of experts on which Labor "must be adequately represented," to make a thorough investigation and report its judgments. The convention was attended by delegates from all over the province, all of whom reported the outlook for I.L.P. candidates brighter than in the provincial election of 1919.

The tariff issue was the most important topic of discussion at the convention. For some time past strong opposition to the tariff reduction plank placed in the platform at the London convention has been developing among the members of the party in the industrial centres of the province. This was especially the case in Hamilton, where many branches of American industries have been located because of the existing tariff. This is one of the chief reasons for calling the special meeting.

The official statement issued by Secretary R. H. Palmer contained the following information respecting the action on this question: "The most important discussion was that in regard to the tariff plank in the party platform, which has been a source of constant controversy ever since its adoption at the London convention in 1920. It was keenly debated, but, instead of causing a division, an almost unanimous decision was reached; and by a vote of 55 to 6 the plank, which reads as follows, was adopted: 'The gradual elimination of import duties on all necessaries of life, and the tools and machinery used in production; the revenue required from these sources to be raised by a taxation of land values and luxuries.'

"The following was substituted in its place: 'Removal of taxation on necessities of life; taxation of land values and abolition of fiscal legislation that leads to class privileges, and that, to the end in view respecting the tariff, a commission of experts be appointed to make a thorough investigation and report its judgments and that such a commission Labor must be adequately represented.'

FLOOD SWEPT VILLAGE

Many Lives Were Lost at Britannia Mines.

Water Plunged Down Steep Mountain Side In British Columbia and Converted Copper Mining Settlement Into Scene of Desolation and Ruin—Inhabitants Received Warning But Had Little Time to Escape.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Oct. 31.—Thirty-six persons are dead, fifteen are injured, a mining town is practically wiped out, another village is partially inundated, railway tracks and bridges are destroyed, completely cutting off Vancouver and the Island both from railroad connection with the eastern part of the province, and damage estimated at several millions of dollars has been wrought by floods in this vicinity on Thursday. Simultaneously on Friday evening the greater part of the town of Britannia Mines of Howe Sound was wiped out by a flood, and the Fraser Valley just east of Vancouver was flooded.

The greater disaster was not known until the next day. The Britannia settlement has communicated with the outside world over its own telephone line and these are rarely used at night. Their destruction passed unnoticed and the disaster, which caused the deaths of at least three dozen people, was unknown until straggling boats brought the news on Saturday morning.

The town, which is devoted to the milling of copper ore, will not recover from the disaster perhaps for several months. The damage in the Fraser Valley to the crops and to the ready people are returned to their flooded homes in the village of Port Coquitlam and railways are being repaired so that hope that on the morrow will see a resumption of traffic. The Canadian Pacific, the Canadian National and the Pacific Great Eastern are all affected by the Fraser and Coquitlam floods.

The floods came after seven or ten days' heavy rain accompanied by snow in the higher altitudes. The warm weather accompanying the precipitation caused the rapid melting of the snow on the mountain tops and a consequent aggravation of the swollen creeks and stream.

Manager J. Donahue, of the Britannia Mines, describes the efforts made by those on duty at the mines proper, three miles back from the beach, to warn the village. When the railway fill, which caused the accumulation of water in the hills, gave way and released a roaring torrent into the creek, urgent warning was sent over the mines telephone. This message was received by Miss Ellen Peterson, on duty at the compressor house in the village. She instantly rang everybody connected by telephone, relaying the mines' message: "For God's sake get out of your houses; flood coming down the creek."

Before the warning could be understood and passed on to all the residents the wall crashed down from the mountainside, swept away transmission lines and plunged the village into darkness. The creek bed, which once carried a veritable river, cut through the centre of the settlement. The arrival of the torrent at sea level meant that everything in its path was carried towards the sea. The water had fallen 2,000 feet in its three mile journey and gained a momentum such that little houses of Britannia could not resist. Today a broad stream divides the untouches fringes of the town strewn with timbers, parts of houses, telephone wires and scraps of heavier furniture smashed to pulpwood. Britannia creek now runs through the village itself. The waters will have to be diverted to their former course by dynamiting.

The flood came on a community confused by the sudden darkness, caused when the transmission lines failed, and a torrential rain fell. The houses on the creek banks were without foundation and yielded readily to the surge of the flood. One man hurried with his wife to the safety, when he met a friend about his doorstep. By the time he could climb on to the roof, he was already out to sea, bobbing about in the waters of Howe Sound. The occupants were rescued finally in a launch. Other houses were crushed to pulpwood when they were caught between obstacles and the rushing water. Many persons were injured by falling timbers, some of these owe their lives to the sawyers, who toiled throughout the night in and out of the maze of float-houses, guided to those in distress by cries and warnings. Candles in pit lamps were of little use in this work. Two children were found asleep in their bed, unhurt, hours after their mother and two brothers had been swept away with a damaged portion of their home. A Mrs. Matheson was taken off in a boat from her house, which was swept down the creek and which crashed to splinters a few minutes afterwards against a heavier building.

Miss Murphy, the school teacher, escaped with a cut wrist, sustained when she broke a window to escape from her bungalow as it was practically upside down by the time she realized the danger. Of her 25 pupils, at least five are drowned. One woman, whose name was not ascertained, was rescued clinging desperately to a puppy, the only other survivor of the family. She had watched her husband and two children go down to their deaths.

Dr. A. M. Menzies, a local practitioner, was crossing a street when the flood came on. He held on to a post and began the slow journey to higher ground, scrambling and sometimes until he reached safety. Then he began the long night's work with the rescuers.

New Wireless Record.

EDMONTON, Alta., Oct. 31.—What is asserted to be a world's record for land transmission of wireless telephony was achieved here on Saturday night ,when a concert program being sent out by wireless from San Francisco was picked up and distinctly recorded. The two points are over 1,400 miles apart. This was accomplished by W. W. Grant, wireless engineer for the Dominion Government.

Songs and instrumental music were distinctly heard by the listeners; also some news items spoken by the chairman.

WILSON IS A SICK MAN

Former American President Refused to See Foch.

Physician Says That He Was Unable to Talk to Great French General and That He May Be Too Ill to Attend Opening of Disarmament Conference—No Basis for Ill-natured Gossip.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31. — Woodrow Wilson is a very sick man.

The former President, according to a statement by Admiral Cary Grayson, his physician, is unable to leave his bed. He is suffering from a series of violent headaches, accompanied by stomach trouble of an aggravated nature.

While the former President's condition is not held to be especially dangerous, the symptoms are such, Admiral Grayson said, to make his stay in bed imperative.

Dr. Grayson's statement was as follows:

Mr. Wilson has been confined to his bed for two days. He is slightly improved to-day, and it is hoped will be up again within a day or so."

Asked as to the nature of the former President's illness, Admiral Grayson replied: "You may call it a digestive disorder."

The former President's illness, it was emphatically stated by Dr. Grayson, constitutes the real and only reason for his unwillingness to receive Marshal Foch, when the latter broke into his round of official visits to drive to the Wilson home for a renewal of the acquaintance began in Paris. Other reasons assigned for the failure to receive Marshal Foch were characterized as pure inventions, Dr. Grayson being the authority for the statement that Mr. Wilson expressed a sincere desire to meet the General and regrets that the interview could not be granted.

The condition of the former President is said to be such as to make it extremely improbable that he will see either Premier Lloyd George or Premier Briand when the latter arrives in Washington next week.

This information was forthcoming from one of Mr. Wilson's closest associates. Furthermore, doubt was expressed whether the former President will be able to take part in the ceremonies attendant upon the burial of the Unknown on Armistice Day of America's unknown hero, or in the opening of the conference on limitation of armaments.

Mr. Wilson is said never to have completely recovered from the prostatic attacks with which he was afflicted shortly after his first collapse. These attacks are understood to have been aggravated within the last few weeks by stomach trouble, attended by a series of headaches, which have caused the ex-President much suffering.

Alarmed by these discouraging symptoms, Dr. Grayson and other medical associates have lately found it necessary to order Mr. Wilson to remain in bed and deny himself to all callers.

"Far from any wish to avoid seeing Marshal Foch, it was a matter of genuine and deep regret to Mr. Wilson that he could not have received and chatted with the Marshal when he called yesterday," Dr. Grayson said.

Fatal Auto Crash.

HOLLAND LANDING, Oct. 31.—As the result of a motor accident, which took place about a mile south of this centre, Sunday evening, Milton McCullough, a laborer from the Stroud district, is dead, and three others are injured. The most serious injuries were sustained by Mrs. McCullough, who has a fractured skull, and who is not expected to recover. A two-year-old boy has slight skin wounds, a four-year-old girl escaped injuries, while Robert Allistan, also of the Stroud district, was bruised about the head. Allistan operates a threshing outfit in the Stroud district.

The cause of the accident is not known, as none of the injured have recovered sufficiently to give the details of the accident. The discovery of the accident was made by another automobile party traveling along the road. They found Mr. McCullough car upturned on the side of the road, badly wrecked, and with the motoring party under it. The injured were taken to the nearby farm house of Mr. Roy Belfrey, and four doctors and a nurse were summoned.

Admiral Beatty Is Sanguine.

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—Admiral Earl Beatty arrived here on Sunday, accompanied by Admiral Hugh Rodman of the United States navy and a staff of aides.

"We are sanguine that great good will result from the conference," he said, "otherwise we would not have come. President Harding is deserving of the gratitude of the whole world for arranging such a gathering."

The present deplorable economic conditions throughout the world demand that something be done to reduce the heavy burden of taxation created by the cost of armaments."

Lady Laurier Seriously Ill.

OTTAWA, Oct. 31.—Lady Laurier is very seriously ill and fears are entertained for her recovery. The last sacraments of the church were administered Saturday. The venerable widow of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who was out a week ago, when she attended a luncheon of the Roman Catholic Women's League. The following day she took a severe chill and weakness of the heart is accompanied by the development of pneumonia. Her condition to-day is reported as slightly improved, but still dangerous. Lady Laurier is slightly over eighty years old. Since the death of her distinguished husband, she has been fairly active and has followed public events with a keen interest. She was one of the distinguished party to welcome the Governor-General and Lady Byng and a fortnight ago attended the Liberal nominating convention.

Spain Makes Health Essential.

MADRID, Oct. 31.—Persons intending to marry in Spain would be compelled to produce a medical certificate showing that the would-be husband and wife are free from disease, under a bill which will soon be introduced in Parliament by the Minister of Interior, it was announced here.

Found Dead Against Tree.

NORTH BAY, Ont., Oct. 31.—The badly decomposed body of an Indian woman, named Mary Ward, fifty years of age, who had been missing since July 4th, was found at Stonecliffe, on the C. P. R., leaning against a tree. It is supposed that the woman, who lived at Rapide des Joachim, Que., and who was in the habit of wandering from one relative's house to another, died while resting.

Lost £1,750,000 by Strikes.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—A Reuter cable from Melbourne says statistics furnished by the Australian Government show that workers lost £1,250,000 last year in wages through 554 industrial disputes.

Love Insurance

The paper slipped from his lordship's lifeless hands. He turned miserably away. Not daring to face either father or daughter, he answered very faintly:

"There is."

Spencer Meyrick sighed.

"That's all we want to know. There will be no wedding, Harrowby."

"Wha-what!" His lordship faced about. "Why, sir, the guests must be downstairs!"

"It is unfortunate, but there will be no wedding." The old man turned to his daughter. "Cynthia," he asked, "have you nothing to say?"

"Yes." White, trembling, the girl faced his lordship. "It seems, Allan, that you have regarded our marriage as a business proposition. You have gambled on the stability of the market. Well, you win. I have changed my mind. This is final. I shall not change it again."

"Cynthia!" And any who had considered Lord Harrowby unfeeling must have been surprised at the anguish in his voice. "I have loved you—I love you now. I adore you. What can I say in explanation of this? We gamble, all of us. It is a passion bred in the family. That is why I took out this absurd policy. My dearest, it doesn't mean that there was no love on my side. There is—there always will be, whatever happens. Can't you understand"—

"Cynthia," he asked, "have you nothing to say?"

She put said her hand on his arm and drew him away to the window.

"It's no use, Allan," she said, for his ears alone. "Perhaps I could have forgiven, but somehow I don't care as I thought I did. It is better, embarrassing as it may be for us both, that there should be no wedding after all."

"Cynthia, you can't mean that. You don't believe me. Let me send for my brother. He will tell you of the passion for gambling in our family. He will tell you that I love you too."

He moved toward the telephone.

"No use," said Cynthia Meyrick, shaking her head. "It would only prolong a painful scene. Please don't, Allan!"

"I'll send for Minot, too!" Harrowby cried.

"Mr. Minot?" The girl's eyes narrowed. "And what has Mr. Minot to do with this?"

"Everything. He came down here as the representative of Boyd's. He came down to make sure that you didn't change your mind. He will tell you that I love you."

A queer expression hovered about Miss Meyrick's lips. Spencer Meyrick interrupted.

"Nonsense!" he cried. "There is no need to"—

"One moment." Cynthia Meyrick's eyes shone strangely. "Send for your brother, Allan, and—for Mr. Minot."

Harrowby stepped to the telephone. He summoned his forces. A strained, unhappy silence ensued. Then the two men entered the room together.

"Minot, George, old boy," Lord Harrowby said helplessly. "Miss Meyrick and her father have discovered the existence of a certain insurance policy about which you both know. They have believed that my motive in seeking a marriage was purely mercenary; that my affection for the girl who was to have become my wife cannot be sincere. They are wrong—quite wrong. Both of you know that. I've sent for you to help me make them understand, I cannot."

George Harrowby stepped forward and smiled his kindly smile.

"My dear young lady," he said, "I regret that policy very deeply. When I first heard of it I, too, suspected Allan's motives. But after I talked with him—after I saw you—I was convinced that his affection for you was most sincere. I thought back to the gambling schemes for which the family has been noted. I saw it was the old passion cropping out anew in Allan—that he was really not to blame—that beyond any question he was quite devoted to you. Otherwise I'd have done everything in my power to prevent the wedding."

"Yes?" Miss Meyrick's eyes flashed dangerously. "And your other witness, Allan?"

The soul of the other witness squirmed in agony. This was too much—too much!

"You, Minot," pleaded Harrowby—"you have understood?"

"I have felt that you were sincerely fond of Miss Meyrick." Minot replied. "Otherwise I should not have done what I have done."

"Then, Mr. Minot," the girl inquired, "you think I would be wrong to give up all plans for the wedding?"

"I—I—yes, I do," writhed Minot.

"And you advise me to marry Lord Harrowby at once?"

Mr. Minot passed his handkerchief over his damp forehead. Had the girl no mercy?

"I do," he answered miserably.

Cynthia Meyrick laughed, harshly, mirthlessly.

"Because that's your business—your mean little business," she said scornfully. "I know at last why you came to San Marco. I understand everything. You had gambled with Lord Harrowby, and you came here to see that you did not lose your money. Well, you've lost! Carry that news back to the concern you work for! In spite of your heroic efforts you've lost! At the last moment Cynthia Meyrick changed her mind!"

CHAPTER XIX.

Cynthia Breaks With Harrowby.

LOST! The word cut Minot to the quick. Lost, indeed! Lost Jephson's stake—lost the girl he loved! He had failed Jephson—failed himself! After all he had done, all he had sacrificed, a double defeat and therefore doubly bitter.

"Cynthia, surely you don't mean"—Lord Harrowby was pleading.

"I do, Allan," said the girl more gently. "It was true what I told you there by the window. It is far better. Father, will you go down and say I'm not to be married, after all?"

Spencer Meyrick nodded and turned toward the door.

"Cynthia," cried Harrowby brokenly. There was no reply. Meyrick went out.

"I'm sorry," his lordship said—"sorry I made such a mess of it, the more so because I love you, Cynthia, and always shall. Goodby."

He held out his hand. She put hers in it.

"It's too bad, Allan," she said. "But it wasn't to be. And even now you have one consolation—the money that Boyd's must pay you."

"The money means nothing. Cynthia"—

"Miss Meyrick is mistaken," Minot interrupted. "Lord Harrowby has not even that consolation. Boyd's owes him nothing."

"Why not?" asked the girl defiantly. "Up to an hour ago," said Minot, "you were determined to marry his lordship."

"I should hardly put it that way. But I intended to."

"Yes. Then you changed your mind. Why?"

"I changed it because I found out about this ridiculous policy."

"Then his lordship's taking out of the policy caused the calling off of the wedding?"

"Y-yes. Why?"

"It may interest you to know and it may interest Lord Harrowby to recall that five minutes before he took out this policy he signed an agreement to do everything in his power to bring about the wedding. And he further promised that if the wedding should be called off because of any subsequent act of his he would forfeit the premium."

"By gad!" said Lord Harrowby.

"The taking out of the policy was a subsequent act," continued Minot. "The premium, I fancy, is forfeited."

"He's got you, Allan," said George Harrowby, coming forward, "and I for one can't say I'm sorry. You're going to tear that policy now and go to work for me."

"I for one am sorry," cried Miss Meyrick, her flashing eyes on Minot. "I wanted you to win, Allan. I wanted you to win."

"Why?" Minot asked innocently.

"You ought to know," she answered and turned away.

Lord Harrowby moved toward the door.

"We're not hard losers," he said blankly. "But—everything's gone. It's a bit of a smashup. Goodby, Cynthia."

"Goodby, Allan—and good luck."

"Thanks." And Harrowby went out with his brother.

Minot stood for a time, not daring to move. Cynthia Meyrick was at the window; her scornful back was not encouraging. Finally she turned, saw Minot and gave a start of surprise.

"Oh—you're still here?"

"Cynthia, now you understand," he said. "You know why I acted as I did. You realize my position. I was in a horrible fix"—

She looked at him coldly.

"Yes," she said, "I do understand. You were gambling on me. You came down here to defend your employer's cash. Well, you have succeeded. Is there anything more to be said?"

"Isn't there? On the ramparts of the old fort the other night"—

"Please do not make yourself any more ridiculous than is necessary. You have put your employer's money above my happiness—always. Really you looked rather cheap today, with your sanctimonious advice that I marry Harrowby. Aren't you beginning to realize your own position—the silly, childish figure you cut?"

"Then you"—

"Last night when you came staggering across the lawn to me with this foolish gown in your arms I told you I hated you. Do you imagine I hates you any less now? Well, I don't." Her voice became tearful. "I hate you! I hate you!"

"Not some day"—

She turned away from him, for she was sobbing outright now.

"I never want to see you again as long as I live!" she cried. "Never! Never! Never!"

Limp, pitiable, worn by the long fight he had waged, Minot stood, staring helplessly at her heaving shoulders.

"Then I can only say I'm sorry," he murmured. "And—goodby."

He waited. She did not turn toward him. He stumbled out of the room.

Minot went below and sent two messages, one to Jephson, the other to Thicker. The lobby of the De la Paz was thronged with brilliantly attired wedding guests, who, metaphorically, beat their breasts in perplexity over the tidings that had come even as they craned their necks to catch the first glimpse of that distinguished bridal party. The lavishly decorated parlor that was to have been the scene of the ceremony stood tragically deserted.

He took a couple of time tables from his desk and sat down in a chair facing the window. All over now. Nothing to do but return to the north as fast as the trains would take him. He had won, but he had also lost.

It was late in the afternoon when the clamor of his telephone recalled him to himself. He leaped up and seized the receiver. Allan Harrowby's voice came over the wire.

"Can you run down to the room, Minot?" he inquired. "The last call, old boy."

Minot went. He found both the Harrowbys there, prepared to say goodby to San Marco forever.

"Going to New York on the Lady Evelyn," said George Harrowby, who was aggressively cheerful. "From there I'm taking Allan to Chicago."

Lord Harrowby smiled wanly.

"Nothing left but Chicago," he drawled. "I wanted to see you before I went, Minot, old chap. Not that I can thank you for all you did. I don't know how. You stood by me like—like a gentleman. And I realize that I have no claim on Boyd's. It was all my fault. If I'd never let Martin Wall rave that confounded policy! But what's the use of iffing? All my fault. And—my thanks, old boy!" He sighed.

"Nonsense!" said Minot. "A business proposition solely, from my point of view. There's no thanks coming to me."

"It seems to me," said George Harrowby, "that as the only victor in this affair you don't exhibit a proper cheerfulness. By the way, we'd be delighted to take you north on our boat. Why not?"

But Minot shook his head.

"Can't spare the time. Thank you just the same," he replied. "I'd like nothing better."

Amid expressions of regret the Harrowbys started for the elevator. Minot walked along the dusky corridor with them.

"We've had a bit of excitement—what!" said Allan. "If you're ever in London you're to be my guest. Old George has some sort of berth for me over there."

"Not a berth, Allan," objected George, pressing the button for the elevator. "You're not going to sleep A job. Might as well begin to talk the Chicago language now. Mr. Minot, I, too, want to thank you."

They stepped into the elevator. The door slammed; the car began to descend. Minot stood gazing through the iron scroll work until the blond head of the helpless Lord Harrowby moved finally out of sight. Then he returned to his room and the time tables, which seemed such dull, unhappy reading.

Jack Paddock appeared to invite Minot not to take dinner with him. His bags, he remarked, were all packed, and he was booked for the 7 o'clock train.

"Did I say her father was in the plumbing business?" he inquired. "My error, Dick. He owns a newspaper office in Grand Rapids. Offered me a job any time I wanted it. Great joke then; pretty serious now, for I'm going off to apply. The other day I had a chill. It occurred to me maybe she'd grown and married the young man with the pale purple necktie who passes the plate in the Methodist church. So I beat it to the telegraph counter, and"—

"She's here when and fancy free?"

"O. K. in both respects. So it's me for Grand Rapids."

"Good boy!" said Minot. "I knew this game down here didn't satisfy you. May I be the first to wish you joy?"

"You? With a face like a defeated candidate? I say, cheer up! She'll stretch out eager arms in your direction yet."

"I don't believe it, Jack."

"Well, while there's life there's still considerable hope lying loose about the landscape. That's why I don't urge you to take the train with me."

An hour later Mr. Paddock spoke further cheering words in his friend's ear and departed for the north. And in that city of moonlight and romance Minot was left practically alone.

He took a little farewell walk through that quaint old town, then retired to his room to read another chapter in the time table. At 4:20 in the morning, he noted, a small local train would leave for Jacksonville. He decided he would take it. With no parlor cars, no sleepers, he would not be likely to encounter upon it any of the startled wedding party bound north.

He rushed through the gate just as it was being closed and caught a dreary little train in the very act of pulling out. Gloomy oil lamps sought vainly to lessen the dour aspect of its two coaches. Panting, he entered the rear coach and threw himself and his bag into a seat.

Five seconds later he glanced across the aisle and discovered in the opposite seat Miss Cynthia Meyrick, accompanied by a very sleepy eyed family.

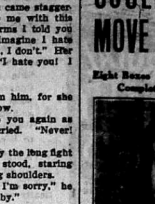
Eight Boxes of "FRUIT-A-TIVES" Completely Relieved Her.



MADAM RICHER

Labelle, P.Q., April 18th, 1921

"It is my duty to tell you and publish to all what your remedy "Fruit-a-tives" has done for me.

I suffered with Rheumatism for ten months; could hardly move in bed; and was miserable all the time. I tried several physicians and took many remedies, but they left me at the same place, in bed and suffering, the Rheumatism was so bad.

I finally started in taking "Fruit-a-tives" and continued the treatment regularly as I found myself getting better. After using eight boxes of "Fruit-a-tives" (which cost only $4.) I am completely well without a trace of Rheumatism."

Madam J. RICHER.

50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

"I wanted to see cross with you a little longer," she said.

"The devil!" said Minot to himself. He knew that she would see in this utter accident nothing save a deliberate act of following. What use to protest his innocence?

He considered moving to another seat. But such a theatric act could only increase the embarrassment. Already his presence had been noted—Aunt Mary had given him a glare, Spencer Meyrick a scowl, the girl a cloudy vague "Where have I seen this person before?" glance in passing.

Spencer Meyrick went forward to the smoker. Aunt Mary, weary of life, slid gently down to slumber. Her unlovely snore filled the dim car.

How different this from the first ride together! The faint pink of the sky grew brighter.

Some sense in looking out now. Minot saw a shack that seemed familiar, then another. Next a station, bearing on its sad shingle the cheery name of Sunbeam. And close to the station, gloomy in the dawn, a desiccated chauffeur beside an aged automobile.

Minot turned quickly and caught Cynthia Meyrick in the act of peering over his shoulder. She had seen the chauffeur too.

CHAPTER XX.

"One last ride together."

THE train had stopped a moment, but was under way again. In those brown eyes Minot saw something wistful, something hurt, saw things that moved him to put everything to a sudden test. He leaped to his feet and pulled madly at the bell cord.

"What—what have you done?" Startled, she stared at him.

"I've stopped the train. I'm going to ride to Jacksonville as I rode to San Marco ages ago. I'm not going alone."

"Indeed!"

"Quick. The conductor will be here in a minute. Here's a card and pencil. Write a note for Aunt Mary. Say you'll meet them in Jacksonville. Hurry, please."

"Mr. Minot!" with great dignity.

"One last ride together, one last chance for me to—to set things right if I can."

"If you can."

"If—I admit it. Won't you give me the chance? I thought you would be game. I dare you!"

For a second they gazed into each other's eyes. The train had come to a stop, and Aunt Mary stirred fretfully in her sleep. With sudden decision Cynthia Meyrick wrote on the card and dropped it on her slumbering relative.

"I know I'll be sorry—but"—she gasped.

"Hurry! This way! The conductor's coming there!"

A moment later they stood together on the platform of the Sunbeam station, while the brief little train disappeared indignantly in the distance.

"You shouldn't have made me do that!" cried the girl in dismay. "I'm always doing things on the spur of the moment—things I regret afterward."

"I know. You explained that to me once. But you can also do things on the spur of the moment that you're glad about all your life. Oh—good morning, Barney Oldfield."

"Good morning," replied the rustic chauffeur with grateful recognition. "Where's it to this time, mister?"

"Jacksonville. And no hurry at all." Minot held open the door, and the girl stepped into the car.

"The gentleman is quite mistaken," she said to the chauffeur. "There is a very great hurry."

"Ages of time until luncheon," replied Minot, blithely, also getting in. "If you were thinking of announcing—something—then."

"I shall have nothing to announce, I'm sure. But I must be in Jacksonville before that train. Father will be furious."

"Trust me, lady," said the chauffeur, grinding again at his hooded music box. "I've been doing stunts with this car since I saw you last. Been over a hundred miles from Sunbeam. Begins to look as though Florida wasn't going to be big enough, after all."

He leaped to the wheel, and again that ancient automobile carried Cynthia Meyrick and the representative of Boyd's out of the town of Sunbeam. But the exit was not so inspiring one. The girl's eyes were serious, cold, and with real concern in his voice Minot spoke:

"Won't you forgive me—can't you? I was only trying to be faithful to the man who sent me down here—faithful through everything, as I should be faithful to you if you gave me the chance. Is it too late, Cynthia"—

"There was a time," said the girl, her eyes wide, "when it was not too late. Have you forgotten? That night on the balcony when I threw myself at your feet and you turned away—do you think that was a happy moment for me?"

"Was it happy for me, for that matter?"

"Oh. I was humiliated, ashamed. Then your silly rescue of my gown, your advice to me to marry Harrowby—

"Would you have had me throw over the men who trusted me?"—

"I—I don't know. I only know that I can't forgive what has happened in a minute"—

"What was that last?"

"Nothing."

"You said in a minute."

"Your ears are deceiving you."

"Cynthia, you're not going to punish me because I was faithful? Don't you suppose I tried to get some one in my place?"

"Did you?"

"The day I first rode on this car with you. And then I stopped trying for"—

"Why?"

"Because I realized that if some one came in my place I'd have to go away and never see you again, and I couldn't do that. I had to be near you, dear girl—don't worry, he can't hear, the motor's too noisy—I had to be where I could see that little curl making a question mark around your ear, where I could hear your voice. I had to be near you even if to do it I must break my heart by marrying you to another man. I loved you. I love you now"—

A terrific crash interrupted. Dolefully the chauffeur descended from the car to make an examination. Dolefully he announced the result.

"Busted right off," he remarked. "Say, I'm sorry. I'll have to walk back to the garage at Sunbeam, and—and I'm afraid you'll have to jest sit here until I come back."

"Cynthia," Minot cried, "I worship you! Won't you"—

The girl gave a strange little cry.

"I wanted to be cross with you a little longer," she said almost tearfully. "But I can't. I wonder why I can't? I cried all night at the thought of never seeing you again. I wonder why I cried? I guess it's because for the first time I'm really in love!"

"Cynthia!"

"Oh, Dick, don't let me change my mind again—please don't!"

"Only over my dead body!"

With one accord they turned and looked at that quaint, southern chauffeur plodding along through the dust and the sunshine. It did not seem to either of them that there was any danger of his looking back.

And happily he didn't.

THE END.

FASHIONS IN BRIEF

Touches of lingerie are appearing on suits and dresses for spring.

Neckwear will be seen in such colors as rose, orange, henna and tomato.

Cotton fabrics and cotton braids appliqued on cloth are a spring feature.

Lockets fashioned from cameo pins are worn suspended on black silk ribbons.

Serge is found oftenest in the straight little afternoon frocks which make a virtue of the utmost simplicity.

Many afternoon frocks have a long cape to go with them in the same color as the material, either in silk or woolen goods.

Lace sleeves are featured in some of the elaborate new blouses. They end about the elbow—or a little below it—and the points of the lace are finished with big colored glass beads.

Crepe de chine, crepe georgette, mousseline de soie, charmeuse and satin are favorite materials for afternoon frocks. Black, navy, maroon and gray are the leading shades.

Patent leather forms the narrow belt which is part of a blouse of orange georgette. The heavy leather belt is in interesting contrast to the sheer fabric of the blouse.

Cockatoos have come in for consideration. They are sometimes embroidered in natural colors on a garden hat or smock, and sometimes embroidered on a bag of satin or velvet.

The very latest wrinkle at the Southern resorts is the wearing of colored ties in white backskin oxfords. The ties match the color of the sport hat, sweater or skirt—if colored skirt is worn.

LACE TRIMMED AND FLOWERS

Lace trimmed and garlanded with flowers of divers sorts, and faced becomingly with blue georgette, this florette hat suggests the long, lazy summer days.

FASHION NOTES OF INTEREST

Sash to Brighten Up Old Serge Frock; Capes of Soft Fabrics—Round Toed Shoes.

One way of freshening up an old blue serge frock is to buy a bright striped sash, with long silk fringe. These sashes are expensive, for they cost from fifteen to twenty dollars, but they give a really striking touch to the frock with which they are used.

Directoire jumpers are made of organdie, sheer but stiff, with fluted collars that stand up around the neck and chin. They are to be worn with coat suits.

Some of the shops are showing decidedly attractive capes for spring, made of soft and lovely fabrics, with collars that fasten high about the throat, below which the cape falls away from the front without any fastening.

Gray frocks of georgette are made with much use of dyed filet—dyed gray, of course, exactly to match the shape of the georgette.

Many of the new spring shoes show round toes. Some of them have a low French heel, a baby Louis heel, as it is called. Some of the shoes are made of suede of some shade cut away to show designs in leather or suede of a darker or lighter shade beneath—a trick resorted to also by the glove makers, who in some of the new gauntlet gloves have done the same thing.

Last summer in Paris there were many shoes with fringed tongues at the front. These were made in leather and suede. Today there are fringed gauntleted gloves, sometimes with the fringe of two tones of the same color.

WINSOME DRESSES FOR GIRLS

Taffeta Silk, Embroidered in Chenille or Metal Thread, Affords Frock That Is Admired.

Many dresses for girls are made of taffeta silk, which are usually embroidered in chenille or metal thread. The bodices are made in the fitted basque style and worn with full circular skirts. One navy blue taffeta dress is bordered with a deep design embroidered in antique gold thread and a carpet embroidery of French blue silk.

In another case the full skirt of a dress is suggested by a series of overlapping narrow circular flounces, the youthful effect of which is increased by an edging of tiny red cord.

The skirt of a black taffeta frock of unusual interest is entirely covered with narrow strips of the silk picoted in bright color looped up in puff designs at intervals down the length of the skirt. The sleeve finish carries out this effect, as it is slashed into narrow strips that are caught under to make a puff.

A redingote black taffeta dress has a full tunic and semi-fitted bodice with a corded, unbelted waistline in a distinct downward curve at the back. The open front discloses an underdress of deep ecru lace with parts of the design worked in pink.

ECONOMY TO HAVE MANY HATS

Summer Headgear Given Time to Rest Between Times Will Make Better Appearance.

One thing to remember in the summer, even more than in the winter, is that several hats worn successively give much better results than one hat worn until it is gone and then another one. For, if you give your hats time to rest between times, they look far better. Brush them and sometimes wipe them off with a damp cloth and when they get damp dry them carefully, keeping the brim shape either by flattening it down on a table or by rolling it to the proper curve with the fingers.

Raisin Substitute.

A good substitute for raisins in fruit cake is one and one-half cupfuls of diced apples cooked in one cupful of thick sirup. Cook slowly; when the apples have taken up the sirup, cool. Add to any good dark cake recipe.

Raisin Bran Bread.

One quart of white flour, one and one-half tablespoons sugar, four teaspoons baking powder, one and one-half tablespoons shortening, one pint of milk or water, two cups seeded raisins, one quart toasted bran flakes, one teaspoon salt. Mix white flour, toasted bran flakes, sugar, salt and baking powder with the shortening; then add the milk or water. Just before putting into pans separate and add the raisins dredged with flour. Put the bread in a hot oven and bake about an hour and a quarter. This bread is particularly good for afternoon tea sandwiches. This recipe will bake two small loaves. Time in preparation, 20 minutes.

A COLUMN ABOUT PIGS

Hints as to Both Summer and Winter Treatment.

How to Protect Them From Sun Scald—A Little Grease on the Body Is Helpful—Keeping Brood Sows Cheaply In Winter — Unnecessary Loss Among Young Pigs.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

During midsummer owners of light colored pigs frequently complain of sunburn or sunscald. This condition of the hide of the animal is similar to that of people; it gives the same degree of uncomfortableness to the pig and is caused in the same manner. Consequently, the same method of prevention and treatment may be carried out.

Shelter Is Most Desirable.

In the first place, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and the prevention is shelter. No matter what kind of stock is in the pasture, shade is essential, and much more so is it for pigs on account of the thin coating of hair on their bodies. If the pasture for pigs is so situated that there are no trees to afford shade to the animals it would be just as well to keep them shut up during the hottest parts of the day and allow them to run out during the evening, night and early morning hours. By keeping them in a pen that is somewhat darkened, they miss both the hot rays of the sun and the flies that are always so bad around a stable of any kind during the hot weather.

Give Them a "Hog Wallow."

Some people provide a "hog wallow" in their pasture which is a very good thing, but the location should be some place in the shade, as it is a well-known fact that the hide will blister far quicker when wet than when dry. A pig seems to think that a wallow is an essential thing, and if he persuades the farmer into thinking the same, the farmer should lead him to believe that during the heat of the day is the best time to keep out of it.

Vaseline Good for Sunburn.

If the pigs have become sunburned at all, it is well to keep them inside for a few days and thoroughly grease their bodies, with some nice smooth grease such as vaseline. The grease tends to keep the air from the irritated skin and ease the uncomfortableness of the animal. Vaseline also has a wonderful healing and curative property which makes it preferable in such cases.—J. C. McBeath, O. A. College, Guelph.

Keep Brood Cows In Winter as Cheaply as Possible.

During the winter the brood sows should be maintained as cheaply as possible, but at the same time they must be properly fed in order to farrow a large number of healthy, well-grown pigs in the spring. Best results are obtained when sufficient food is given to produce daily gains on the sows of one-half or three-fourths of a pound. To do this the grain feed must be limited, and diluted with some roughage, for unless the ration has sufficient bulk, the sows will become constipated and hungry, due to the undistended condition of the digestive tract. Legume hays are the chief roughages available at this season, and their use will cheapen the cost of feeding.

Alfalfa Excellent for Feed.

If either alfalfa, clover, soy-bean, or cow-pea hay makes an excellent roughage, and when fed, little or no high-priced protein concentrate is needed to balance the corn. Bright, leafy alfalfa hay gives the best results of any of these roughages. Alfalfa meal is simply the best grade of alfalfa hay chopped into a meal. Good hay contains almost as much nourishment as alfalfa hay, and soy-bean hay, cut and cured when the beans are almost ripe, is a very nutritious feed. Cowpea hay should be cut when the first pease are ripening and consequently does not have as high food value as soy-bean hay. Great care must be exercised in curing soy-bean and cowpea hay, for the stalks are very heavy and succulent and unless thoroughly dried are apt to mold. Under no condition should a brood sow be fed upon any roughage which is not bright, nutritious, and free from smut or mold. She does not relish or thrive on such inferior feed. It is very apt to cause severe digestive troubles and may lead to the loss of her litter.

Unnecessary Loss Among Young Pigs.

On 75 Minnesota farms a total of 5,286 pigs were farrowed with an average of 8.31 per litter. Of this number 9.21 per cent. were farrowed dead, 18.21 per cent. died before weaning, 68.30 per cent. were raised, and 31.70 per cent. of the original pig crop was lost. Improper feeding and lack of exercise by the brood sows during the winter were responsible for most of the trouble (unnecessary trouble) at farrowing time. Brood sows should be encouraged to get out and work every day. The droppings should be watched. If the sows are constipated, oilmeal or bran should be introduced into their ration until satisfactory condition results. For immediate action a reasonable dose of epsom salts should be given.

Arsenate of lead or paris green are good remedies to use against chewing insects. When paris green is used it is well to add an equal quantity of lime to prevent injury to the foliage.

Would Dyke Pas Land.

A Dominion survey shows that in the Pas country, on the borders of Saskatchewan and Manitoba, there are 800,000 acres of the best agricultural land in Western Canada. As the section is subject to periodic flooding a system of dyking is recommended.

Field crops of Canada last year are estimated to represent $170 per capita.

ON TRAINING OF COLTS

They Should Not be "Broken," but Educated.

Start Them Wearing Harness and Bridle — Then Hitch and Give Light Work at First — Methods of Keeping Cow Records.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The too common practice of allowing colts to go "unbroken" until such time as they are required to perform the functions of a horse in the spring, is irrational, and is unfair to the animal. Colts should not be "broken"; they should be taught or educated. In the unhandled, or unbroken colt, the muscular, respiratory and nervous system (the organs whose functions are taxed in the performance of the ordinary functions of a horse) are weak and undeveloped from lack of function. Hence, when the unprepared animal is asked to perform ordinary horse labor, he has neither any knowledge of what he is required to do, nor the muscular and respiratory tone that is necessary for its satisfactory performance; therefore, unless very carefully handled, and very little work done for the first two or three weeks, trouble of various natures that will probably necessitate complete rest for a reasonable time is very liable to result. Hence, a regular course of preparation during the late winter and early spring months, when the time of both man and horse is not very valuable, should be given in order to have the colts in such condition when time becomes valuable, that they will be able to perform a reasonable amount of work with satisfaction to the driver and safety to themselves. This course should be commenced at least six weeks before regular work is expected to commence.

They Should Be Harnessed and Bridled Early.

The colt or colts should first be taught to wear harness and bridle by being allowed to run free for a few hours daily in a box stall or paddock with the harness on. It is then good practice to match each with a handy, smart and good-natured horse, or if necessary a pair of colts together, and teach them to drive, obey the words of command, stand when asked to, etc.

When they have become reasonably handy without being hitched, they should be hitched to a sleigh or wagon. Care should be taken to see that the harness fits properly. This applies especially to collars. The collars in which they are expected to work later on should be worn. Each should have his own, and it should fit properly, not being too wide, so as to allow a rolling motion, nor yet sufficiently narrow to pinch at any point. The bearing surface should conform thoroughly to the surfaces of the neck and shoulder with which it comes in contact, except at the bottom, where sufficient vacant space to allow the introduction of a man's fingers should exist.

Exercise or Light Work a Benefit.

The colt or pair should be given daily exercise or light work. Commencing with an hour or two the first day and gradually increasing the amount, until they will be able to perform a full day's reasonable exertion without showing signs of weariness. The amount of grain given should also be gradually increased in proportion to the work or exercise given. By such usage the muscular, respiratory and nervous systems gradually gain tone, the muscles with which the harness, especially the collar, comes in contact, gradually become hardened and increased in power of resistance, hence become much less liable to soreness. In many cases, on account of the hardening of the muscles, they lose bulk; hence a collar that may have fitted perfectly at first, may now be too large. This should be attended to either by providing fresh collars or filling the extra space of the old ones with sweat pads. While we prefer collars without sweat pads, the latter is much better than vacant space.—J. H. Reed, V.S., O. A. College, Guelph.

Cows Testing Under Three Per Cent.

A table showing the number of herds and cows undergoing official test for milk production during the month of March last reveals the fact that a very small percentage of the farmers are as yet availing themselves of the opportunity of carrying on this work with the aid of the Dairy Branch at Ottawa; also that quite a number of the 3,600 cows in question are giving milk that tests lower than three per cent. butter fat the latter fact alone being sufficient indication that testing, and the disposing of the low-testing individuals, is most necessary on a large scale, if dairy farming in the Dominion is to compete successfully with that industry in other countries. As pointed out by the Dairy Branch, some of the cows tested as low as 2.2 per cent. fat, and many low testers in a herd make it difficult to produce milk of a standard quality. Of 3,604 cows tested during the month, 306 tested under 3 per cent.

High individual productions of milk and fat in certain cases clearly show that well-bred cows properly fed and cared for will do remarkably well under ordinary farm conditions. The highest yield was given by a cow in the herd of J. G. Wait, Colborne, Ont. This cow produced 13,514 lbs. milk and 462.1 lbs. fat between Februray 29 and December 31, 1920. She freshened this year on February 25 (within a year) and promises to duplicate last year's production. Mr. Wait has been keeping records for ten years and has built up a herd of high grade cows.

It is interesting to find that the cows giving the highest yields of milk and fat are found in herds where cow testing has been carried on continuously for several years. Perseverance in this work with intelligent breeding, feeding and weeding will pay big returns in increased milk production per cow.

SELLING FARM PRODUCE

Standardization Is Necessary for the Best Results.

Graded Fruits or Vegetables Attract While Mixed Grades Repel—The Satisfied Consumer Will Come Again—Quality Pays.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Will the consumer pay for quality? Yes, and liberally if he understands what standardization means. Criticism is frequently directed at the farmer producer for the lack of attention given to grading and packing of the product of his farm. Fruits in different stages of ripeness, different sizes, shapes and colors are frequently seen in the same package. Chickens of various breeds, sizes, types and degree of plumpness are jumbled together in the same crate and form a marked contrast when placed beside a crate containing birds of the same sex, size, plumpness and color. To the well ordered mind uniformity always appeals, while mixtures and jumbles repel as so much junk. If a candy store runs into a candy store it will soon learn that mixtures are sold at a lower figure than standard confections. And so it goes through life — a mental attitude is developed by the great majority of consumers to regard those products that are not standardized as being less attractive and also of lower value. The percentage of particular consumers has increased much faster than the percentage of agricultural producers who standardize their products. In the old days the wormy apple, the misshapen potato and the old hen may not have lost their attractiveness, but times have changed, more people have more money to spend on foods than ever before. With the increase of the family income or wealth during the past twenty years the attitude of the younger generation towards the foods that they eat has changed very considerably. If we refer to the good old days when oatmeal was the standard breakfast food and citrus fruits were only seen at Christmas time, we will realize what present day attitude toward quality in foodstuffs means when compared with the past. With this advance in tastes for foods which may be largely flavor and of little value when considered from the standpoint of nourishment, the demands for foods that appeal to the eye and to the sense of taste have increased very greatly during the past five years.

People Will Pay for Quality.

Standardization of food products will put the rosy cheeked, clean, uniform, sound apples in one basket and it will put the wormy, scaboy, misshapen product in another. People are willing to pay for quality providing they have a guarantee that they will be handed a quality product in exchange for their money. How many householders have had the all too frequent experience of putting one-third of their purchase in the garbage can? Inferior materials should be directed into channels where they would be used to the best advantage instead of being a millstone or dead weight in occupying space, increasing carrying costs in transportation and reducing the attractiveness of the superior portion of the commodity.

In seasons of food shortage mixed and lower grades of food products will usually sell and show a margin of profit, but when food products are abundant the more attractive grades sell most readily and create a want for more high-class produce, while demand frequently must be filled from the lower grade. This substitution of a low grade for a high or standard product kills the incentive to buy. Sting once, the particular purchaser consumer will hesitate t. buy. They look, but do not buy.

Grading Best for Perishable Foods.

The amount of perishable food in the fruit, vegetable and poultry product classes that is now consumed, while very large, is not as great as it would be under standardization. Experiences with mixed grades, poor quality and poor packing leave an impression on the mind of the average purchaser that will take some time to erase. When the perishable food product of Ontario is standardized and marketed in a way that will command the confidence of the consuming public an increased demand is bound to follow.

The Satisfied Consumer Is an Asset.

If all the food produce offered for sale could be standardized and marketed in such a way as to develop the market for future crops much benefit would result. Satisfied consumers of this year's product will look to the same source again next year. Consumers know or should know what they want, and if given a standardized packet of food product in exchange for their money will, if suited, go on patronizing standard products. Salesmanship has been too frequently used to sell a consumer something that he did not want, material sold with the one idea of getting rid of it and no thought of the future.

If the farm end of the food products industry is to develop to the fullness it merits, all produce grown for sale will have to be marketed through co-operative marketing organizations. Standard, honesty prepared, packed and delivered produce is the only course to pursue in developing a worthwhile market for farm produce in our Canadian cities or abroad. Any food producing community that is without a co-operative marketing organization should consider the establishment of such. Those districts that have such should consider expansion by amalgamating with similar organizations. Standardized products, common honesty, any industry will make for success in producing and disposing of farm products.—L. Stevenson, Secretary, Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

FRUIT FOR MARKET.

Pathologists Could Help Fruit Inspectors In Their Work.

What might be used as an argument in favor of shipping peaches in dry cars for short distances, is the statement made by a fruit expert, that fungus spores on the outside of peaches often develop only when the temperature goes up in the refrigerator car and the moisture is there. In such conditions, the fungus will develop on the peach and it will decay during transportation. Writing in Foods and Markets, Dr. O. F. Burger, plant pathologist, says: "There are a lot of cars arriving on the market with the temperature showing all the way from sixty, seventy, eighty, and higher, and when you get them with the higher degree of temperature, you have a greater amount of rot, sometimes from seventy-five to eighty per cent." It is generally conceded that, for successful shipping of most fruits for long distances, it is necessary, not only to maintain a low temperature throughout the entire journey, but also to have the fruit thoroughly cooled before it goes on the cars. Such practice results in fruit travelling for a very considerable time arriving at its destination in good condition, provided the fruit is sound to start with, and it is possible, and sometimes happens, that disease affecting the fruit to a very slight degree will not develop in transit, under ideal conditions of refrigeration. However, any disease infection that is present is likely to develop very rapidly after the refrigerated fruit is unloaded, and the person most likely to sustain loss from the purchase of such fruit is the ultimate consumer.

The experience of the writer, in connection with relatively short-distance shipping of peaches, is, that fruit not pre-cooled, and shipped in dry cars not too crowded, will arrive in better condition than fruit not pre-cooled and shipped in refrigerator cars under the average kind of icing that is given on the railroads. Provided, of course, that the fruit is sound when shipped. This has been found to apply in the case of shipments that were from five to six days in transit. Investigations made at Grimsby, Ont., of the precooling, shipment and cold storage of peaches, forced the conclusion that the peach is not truly a cold-storage fruit. "When picked fully ripe or after the flesh has started to soften before being placed under refrigeration, all varieties soon become mealy and dry. In view of these facts peaches should not be held under refrigeration longer than is actually necessary to comply with marketing conditions," says the report of the investigataors.

The above experience of shipping peaches does not conflict, however, with Dr. Burger's claim that it is necessary to have pathologists with the market inspectors, to describe to them the diseases of fruit as they come in, and for investigational work. The last word has not been said with regard to transportational diseases of fruit, he points out. The work cannot be done in five minutes, nor in ten, nor in a day, nor in many days. Much of the work will take years."

DEAR PEOPLE,—

We purpose taking for our text this period, "Sell Your Hammer and Buy a Horn." Our past lectures, besides being to us very profitable, have proved also to have annoyed one or two persons, namely, bums and stool pigeons. So accept our apologies if we seem to be blowing a little, and try us out and we will prove our words. We intend during the coming months to do a little profit sharing among our friends. Whilst visiting in Toronto and West it was our good fortune to become acquainted with leather dealers of a much larger standing than some of our competitors, and also to buy in markets more reasonable. By buying in large quantities we were able to purchase the best oak tanned leather at 17c. below ordinary market price. So as an inducement for you to try out this real good quality we intend to make a big reduction in the price of our shoe repairs, so take note of the following list and give us a trial to convince you we have the real goods.

The demand for Tanlac has broken all world's records. Over Twenty Million bottles have been sold since it was placed on the market six years ago. Tanlac is sold in Napanee at Wallace's Drug Store, Limited, and by leading druggists everywhere.

The deputation from the town which went to Toronto last week had an interview with the Minister of Highways, Hon. Mr. Biggs. The deputation were informed by the minister that he would personally inspect Roblin's hill in about ten days, and would then decide what further work should be done.

There is a very interesting patient in the Kingston general hospital at present, in the person of Mrs. Mary Smith who is 102 years old. She recently sustained a fracture of the thigh at her home in South Fredericksburgh, and was taken to the hospital there. Mrs. Smith, though past the century mark, is otherwise in splendid health. She was born in the Township of Loughborough and her husband, long since departed, was Edward Smith. She has one son still living.

On Saturday evening last about six o'clock fire destroyed the barns of Myro Schryver, about four miles south of Napanee. The barn, with the summer's crop, was totally destroyed. Mrs. Schryver, who was milking when the fire was discovered, had just time to get the cows and horses out. It is not known how the fire originated, as Mr. Schryver was most particular about matches around the barn, never using them or allowing anyone else to use them. There was some insurance carried, but the season's crop and about one thousand bushels of 1920 crop was stored in the barn.

The remains of the late Miss Ethel Hawley was brought to Napanee Wednesday afternoon and taken to her mother's residence, Adolphustown, for burial in the family plot. Miss Hawley was the only daughter of the late Ryckerson Hawley and Mrs. Hawley, Dorland, and at the time of death was in charge of the operating room at St. Andrew's military hospital. Miss Hawley served four years overseas. Her death will cause wide regret in nursing circles where she was beloved by all for her gentle manner and kind thoughtfulness to all. Besides her mother, one brother, George Hawley, in the west, are left to mourn.
